Notice to Public.
Having sold my interest in the firm of Wirth & Winterbottom, I wish to thank the public for the liberal patronage extended and ask a continuance of the same to Mr. Wirth.
THOMAS WINTERBOTTOM.

The busiest and mightiest little thing that ever was made is Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. They do the work whenever you require their aid. These tablets change weakness into strength, listlessness into energy, gloominess into joyousness. Their action is so gentle one doesn't realize they have taken a purgative. Sold by all druggists.

The Woodmen of the World and the Woodmen Circle held joint installation at the hall Saturday evening. After the services a splendid banquet was spread and a general social time enjoyed by all. The attendance by both orders was encouraging and all felt well repaid for an evening thus spent.

The home of R. P. Thomas, near the Central school building, is quarantined for scarlet fever. Their little daughter, Lucille, has been sick for several days, and the physicians pronounce it scarlet fever.

Answering the Children

By Mrs. Allen Hensley.
There is a question that is a vital one to every thoughtful mother. To each of us there has come or will come a time when our child has put or will put to us the question—"Mother, where did the baby come from?" How is the question to be answered?
There is, thank God, no shame-facedness in the child; he asks the question simply, as he might ask—"Mother, where does the rain come from?" excepting as simple a reply, and with us rests the grave responsibility of answering him rightly.
It seems to me a fundamental necessity that in order to present the subject beautifully to our child, we must think beautifully of it ourselves.
We must place the sex relation on the high ethical level where it belongs or we must be honest and logical and openly avow ourselves atheists and iconoclasts. If we do not look at the sex relation purely ourselves, how can we expect our children to do so?
The following idea is often urged by mothers:—"But I do not want my children to hear of such things. I want them to be innocent." Of course you do, dear mother.
If this were the question, whether our children should be told of these things, or allowed to remain in ignorance of them, there would be no need of discussion. We should all most probably elect that they remain ignorant until they are of mature age, but, unfortunately, this is not the question. Any woman who has any knowledge of school life, of the precocity of the children of the present day, of the sexual unrest that constitutes one of the greatest dangers of a great city, knows that there is no doubt that our child must sooner or later, sometimes at a very early age, learn of sex matters from his companions, if he does not learn them elsewhere.
Few mothers have any conception to what extent these subjects are discussed by children and at what an early age. Your little ten-year-old son goes to school to-day ignorant of any explanation of the coming of his baby sister except that of the stork, or the doctor's medicine chest, perhaps; he comes home with a very different idea that makes him in his heart despise his parents, that makes him ashamed and horrified, that remains with its vulgar terms and its alarming suggestiveness to mar the future serenity of his young soul.
It is not a question as to whether he shall learn of these things or not; it is a question of how he shall learn them. Shall he be made acquainted with the great law of reproduction through the coarse words of a servant or the vicious imaginings of a morbid school fellow, or shall he be told of them reverently, beautifully, by the lips of his mother who bore him? Early images do not leave the mind of a child. An ugly word, an impure picture, an obscene act, will remain with all its horrid suggestion, not only throughout his boyhood but through all his manhood and maturity. The lad may struggle hard to be pure, but it will be a terrible fight.
God and His angels alone know what our boys, whom we would give our lives for, have to contend against through the years of adolescence; if there be aught that we can do, as mothers, to help to avert, to strengthen, will we not do it gladly?—The Light.

Chapman Sells Out.
A deal was made the first of the week between Chapman, the feed yard man, and J. P. Musselman of Morrill, Kas., whereby the latter becomes owner of the stables. The new firm will be J. P. Musselman & Son, and they will continue to operate the place as a feed and sale stable.
