"Back to the soil," ay, ay! that's where we're all going, and for the most of us the pace is a killing one.

In this age of extreme tenseness it is refreshing to meet a man who knows how to enjoy the luxury of living.

Kansas farmers are already hatching an antitoxine warranted to make the user immune from the meatless infection.

New York City has an extremely sweet tooth, for its people consumed 280,000,000 pounds of sugar during the last year.

Jim Hill says people will go to the farm when they get hungry. Presumably the railroad king knows since he has been there.

College men are failures at love-making, says an Illinois publication. It's pretty hard to lead an educated man up to some things.

Chicago is arranging a world's municipal congress for 1911. It is presumed insurgents will have to know the grip and passwords to get into this congress.

Somebody in Berlin is figuring out a big gas bag to carry passengers in a flight from Germany to Vancouver, British Columbia. Too many bounding billows involved to suit our fastidious traveling habits.

When one man raises an ear of corn for which he refuses $1,000, and another succeeds in producing 226 bushels of the same on one acre of ground, it becomes the common place farmer to look up and take notice.

The city of Lima, Peru, has given Hon. W. J. Bryan a gold medal, Mrs. Bryan a jewel studded medal and their daughter a smaller medal. Peru seems to take very kindly to our distinguished citizen—maybe they'd give him a presidency if he'd speak to them about it.

Meat prices and eggs are falling, according to reports. Now what will happen to the "between men" who have been trying to corner products at fairly stiff prices with the expectation of unloading the full supply at exorbitant prices? Somebody besides the consumer is going to get his dear little pocketbook squeezed before this is all over.

The federal government is going after the Chicago meat packers and a strong effort will be made to put some of them in prison. The maximum penalty for violation of the trust law on each count is $5,000 fine and a year in jail. Realizing the fine amounts to nothing, the government prosecutors intend to use every effort to convict the Armour and the Swifts and some others and coop them up for about one year—just to show there's no ill feeling.

The south seems to bring sorrow and misfortune to Thomas Taggart through odd coincidences. It was only a few years ago that the daughter of Mr. Taggart, with a merry party, lost her life in the gulf of Mexico. They were in a gasoline launch, and fragments of the little launch were all that was ever found of the missing ones. It is supposed the gasoline exploded. Now Mr. Taggart in a pheasant hunting expedition in the south has been injured in such manner that he may lose the sight of one eye.

"WHITE SLAVERY."

The country is becoming thoroughly aroused over the exposure brought to bear upon the heinous "White Slave" traffic in the nation. The horrors of intemperance pale into insignificance compared with this traffic in the bodies and souls of girls innocent, unsophisticated country girls are lured to large cities under the promise of light work and good wages, and various other pretenses and when once there they are cast into houses of prostitution from which escape is virtually impossible, and there their young lives are wrecked. They can not escape, they are constantly watched, they are not permitted to have clothing in which they could appear on the streets even if they could escape, and worse, they are compelled to write home to their parents—if they have any—telling them they have employment and are doing well, even sending small amounts of money home to the family. Yet they are as virtually and literally slaves, "white slaves" as were ever the blacks of the South. The states are becoming alive to this horrible iniquity. Several states have passed the most stringent laws bearing upon the subject, and there will be no cessation of efforts to wipe out this foul crime until every state in the union has passed laws making any demon, male or female—they do not deserve the name of man or woman—who engages in the traffic of luring girls to destruction, outcasts and outlaws before society and the law. Every father and mother should certainly be interested in the suppression of this monstrous evil in our land.

The farmers of Kentucky have just organized a wool growers association which will sell the 1919 product direct to the manufacturers at a gain to the farmers from $500,000 to $1,000,000.

The movement against intoxicants has changed its name three times. First it was a temperance movement. Then it became the prohibition party. Now it is the anti-saloon fight.

The Norfolk and Western Railway's five and one-half mile trestle bridge across Albemarle Sound is the longest of its kind in the world and cost one million dollars.

THE WEEK'S SOCIAL EVENTS

Mrs. M. Giannini gave a very jolly surprise for her little granddaughter, Nellie Lee Holt, last Tuesday afternoon, the occasion being her tenth birthday. It was indeed a surprise but the little lady soon found herself at ease and assisted in making the afternoon a jolly one for her little friends. Games were indulged in until the refreshment hour arrived and the children were served with a delicious lunch. Mrs. Holt and Mrs. Speare assisting Mrs. Giannini. Nellie Lee was presented with a number of nice birthday gifts.

The Woman's club met Tuesday afternoon with Mrs. D. M. Davies, a very good attendance being out. Some ladies, who were to have taken part in the program were absent and their papers were not substituted. Miss Margaret Steele read an excellent paper on "Early Artists of America." Mrs. Davies entertained the ladies with several very fine phonograph records. The social hour was a very enjoyable one.

THE BIG QUESTION.

What Effect Will The Boycott Have On The Market?

Kansas City Stock Yards, January 28th, 1910.—Every day brings us scores of inquiries similar to this. Frankly, we are not gifted with the power of prophecy, and cannot foretell,—but we are thinkers; so are you, and a few figures may help to solve the problem to your better peace of mind.

There was a shortage of approximately 2,158,000 hogs marketed at the five central markets in 1909, as compared with 1908, with only 323,000 cattle and 285,999 sheep to offset it, leaving a shortage of about 300 million pounds of meat,—and in addition to this consider a million meat-eating immigrants to feed!

On top of this comes the government estimate of stock on feed, with shortage of over two million cattle, and nearly six and one-half million hogs.

Don't conditions warrant present high prices?

Is it not a question of the "Law of Supply and Demand?"

And will a "boycott," even of one million people, with an estimated monthly meat consumption of approximately five million pounds, have anything more than a temporary effect against this tremendous shortage?

Cattle Market—Strictly choice heavy steers steady, top 7.05; everything lower: Unfinished heavy steers 15c, medium weight and short-fed kinds 25 to 35c, best heavy cows 20 to 25c, other butcher grades 25 to 50c, bulls 10 to 25c, veals 25 to 50c, best stockers and feeders steady others 40 to 50 off.

Hogs—20,000 more hogs this week, lowest 8.30, against 8.60 last Friday, but back to 8.42 yesterday, and with only 3,000 here today, looks strong, possibly a little higher.

Sheep—35 to 50c lower.—Lee Live Stock Commission Co.

MASS MEETING.

Mens' Mass Meeting Held at The Brethren Church Sunday.

The men's meeting held at the Brethren church Sunday afternoon was a decided success. The church was well filled with attentive listeners and throughout the whole service the spirit of real devotion prevailed. Mr. Jones headed a quartet of men who rendered several beautiful selections of sacred music. Rev. Brooks, the presiding officer, read a few selections of Bible lessons and introduced the first speaker, Rev. Nanninga.

The theme of his talk was, "The Message of the Church to The Men of Today." In outlining this theme the speaker presented the superiority of the church, the stability of the church, and the mission of the church. The closing part, the appeal of the church is making to the men of today, men, clean men, loyal men, active men, men who dare to stand for the right; a laity with leadership and ability to teach in the Sunday schools and active in every department of church work. The address delivered in a warm hearted and earnest spirit was well received. Rev. Day followed in a very happy vein. Mr. Day shows that he is at home when he talks to men. The Tribune believes that a meeting of this kind at stated periods during the year cannot fail to do good.

TONS OF WASTE PAPER DAILY

Stupendous Quantity That is All the Time Being Discarded as Without Further Use.

Hearing of processes for the reclamation of waste timber brings to mind the tremendous quantity of paper daily thrown aside as useless. An office of ordinary size produces at least a ton of waste paper in a month, which is disposed of at a price ranging from $5 to $10. The purchasers of this office by-product feed it to machines that bundle the paper by a sort of hay-press process, and the magic of machinery returns the soiled scraps in pristine whiteness. Waste paper has become so much a matter of course that new offices are built with a paper shed, a contrivance for caring directly for this waste. In some businesses this product amounts to hundreds of tons in a year, and where the amount is large, as in a city printing office, it is gathered every day.

In addition to the paper of commercial and manufacturing concerns, there is the constant waste going on in every home, which would aggregate thousands of dollars every year if accounted for in the economics of the country. Possibly, when the conservation commission has disposed of its big problems, it will find means to eliminate this source of waste.—National Magazine.

CLIMBED LADDER TO SADDLE

Work of Mounting a Horse Something of a Feat for Ponderous Gen. Shafter.

"I see you had something about Gen. Shafter the other day," said the sergeant, whose service stripes reached almost to his chevrons. "I served under him many years, but I cannot remember when his waist line was less than the 44 mark. 'Pecos Bill' we used to call him. It was a great sight to see him mount his horse. Sometimes he used to have a stepladder, and it often took two orderlies to hoist him into the saddle. When he was commandant at the Presidio he hit upon a device that put the stepladder in the shade and brought great relief to his orderlies. At headquarters the office opened upon a broad and high porch. Well, talk about strategy! Col.—he was colonel then—Shafter saw the possibilities of the porch. One day he sent for a carpenter, who cut out a section of the railing. Then the orderly brought the colonel's war horse alongside the porch at this opening so that all the colonel had to do was to step into the saddle. After that it was up to the horse.

What Women Should Read.

We women would all be the better for the reading of Bluebooks. However loud the talk may be about emancipation and equality, the fact is that the training of girls remains mostly on lines which make for narrowness of outlook. It is nearly always confined to a knowledge of the circle of society in which their parents move. They are carefully guarded from meeting anyone with "views"; the novel is the sole medium available for information as to the lives of the sets of people both above them and below them. It requires a strong individuality to triumph over surroundings, and when I hear complaints of the intellectual inertia of the average woman, and that she cannot be got to read even the morning newspaper, instead of joining in, I always wonder how she has turned out as well informed as she is.—"Frances" in London T. P's Weekly.

Queer Perversity of Taste.

In the museum at Stuttgart the new section devoted to showing perversity of taste has become one of the popular parts of the institution. Writing about this unique educational feature, a Brussels paper says: "We can all sympathize with the authorities for exhibiting conspicuously bunches of flowers made from human hair. What could ever have induced people to devote time to learning how to make these impossibilities? The curator should be complimented on holding up to scorn the pin-cushions in the form of kittens and babies, because no child can see one of these constantly in use without having its sense of pity blunted. And the handkerchiefs with Zeppelin's portrait on them—are they intended as compliments or otherwise?"

Virtuous Indignation.

"The reporter who came to see about the fancy ball was a horrid creature." "Why?" "He asked for my picture to publish with the account and I told him indignantly I did not care for such notoriety. Then I had to go out of the room a minute and forgot my picture, which was lying on the table near where he was standing, and—" "He took it and put it in?" "N—no, he l—left it there!"

An Unequaled Feat.

"What an ideal business manager old Charon would have made for a theater, instead of being wasted on a phantom ferry!" "Why?" "Because he could make even the dead-heads pay their way."

Less Dangerous.

"So you don't guide hunting parties any more?" "Nope," said the guide. "Got tired of being mistook for a deer." "How do you earn a living now?" "Guide fishin' parties. So fer, nobody ain't mistook me fer a fish."

Getting a Slice of the Turkey is very desirable at any season of the year. This expression has been used to denote various things which give pleasure, such as dividends on bank stock, interest on savings certificates, and things of that sort. You no doubt would like a slice of the turkey; but first you must get the turkey. What have you done to secure this most desirable bird? Some there be who go out and "bag" him with one shot. The majority, however, must "raise him by hand." If that is what you are doing, putting aside a little of your savings daily until there is enough to buy the turkey, and make your slice secure, then you should lose no time in connecting with us, as we can help you a whole lot. Having a bank account with us is like a certificate of thrift and good character. Shall we issue one for you in the form of a pass-book? Interview us regarding this.
