This contractor got results.

He knew how to feed his men.

Some years ago a contractor building a railroad in a warm climate was troubled a great deal by sickness among the laborers.

He turned his attention at once to their food and found that they were getting full rations of meat and were drinking water from a stream near by.

He issued orders to cut down the amount of meat and to increase greatly the quantity of Quaker Oats fed to the men.

Don't sign contracts on the strength of the fairy tales of the smooth-tongued stranger, without an investigation as to their statements. Most people are inclined to trade at home, providing they can do as well as elsewhere. We can't do your work unless you give us a chance to compete. If you give us the desired opportunity [which costs you nothing] it is up to us to land your order. Why not see us before you buy monuments?
