

METHODS OF CATCHING FISH.

Hook and Line Shown to Be by No Means the Only Way to Capture the Finny Tribe.

The open season was at hand, and the anglers got their tackle ready eagerly.

"Speaking of tackle," said the traveler, "I have fished with ducks, hammers, dogs."

"Truly?" they exclaimed.

"In certain parts of Virginia," he replied, "duck fishing still goes on. It is an antique sport for gentlemen. You fasten baited lines to ducks' legs and swim them in a well-stocked pond, following in a boat to see the fun. Many a good, stiff fight I've watched between a duck and an old pike. The duck always wins. She drags her catch on to the bank and eats it if you are not too quick for her."

"They fish with hammers in the mountain streams of Montenegro. There's a kind of trout that lurks under stones. You biff a likely stone, turn it over, and the chances are you take up a couple of Montenegrin trout."

"It's on the coast of Brittany, out Mont St. Michel way, that they fish with dogs. In those gray, shining sands of Brittany the Conger eels love to burrow, and dogs are trained to nose them out the same as pigs are trained to nose out truffles. It's not bad sport. On a good day your dog will turn up 15 long, fat eels for you. You must catch the wriggling rascals quickly, or they'll be under the sand again before you can say Jack Robinson."

AFRICAN NATIVES ARE NOISY.

Laughter is Seldom Heard in the Uproar—Sounds of Tomtoms and Big Shells.

Among the African natives there can be nothing done without noise, according to William B. Clarke of Pittsburgh, Pa., who has traveled extensively in Africa.

"It is simply appalling, the rush, the roar, the chatter and the bustle, like Bedlam let loose," Mr. Clarke said. "The principal object of conversation is said to be money, and the hubbub, bawling and uproar in all sorts of tones from shrill and screaming to gruff and growling, accompanied by all sorts of pestilential with tongue, head and feet are beyond description."

"It is rather odd, but laughter is almost never heard in this uproar; and as for whistling, it is a lost art. If there are any quarrels they are not to be heard in public, although when a company of natives gets to carrying on an animated conversation it appears to the observer as if the next act would be a melee."

"In addition to these natural sounds there are others of an artificial character that are equally familiar to the traveler. Such is the noise of the drums, called tomtoms, which are beaten on every occasion, and a kind of pipe about 18 inches long, with holes like those of a flute, and breathed through in a way that produces a variety of notes of a wild, discordant character. A frightful noise is made by the kaffa men blowing on a big shell."

Fly Matter.

General attention is now being directed against the house fly. The fly is not now considered an ordinary and inevitable nuisance, as it once was, but is known to be a menace. The fly breeds in filth and revels in it, and with his feet stuck full of refuse, tracks it in the food that people eat. In this way it spreads disease germs. It is not a great task to guard against the invasion of the house, and especially of the kitchen, by flies. Scrupulous housekeepers did it long before the dangerous nature of the fly was suspected. The means that will protect a man's house from the mosquito will keep out the fly. Use screens. There are many devices for destroying flies should they gain entrance to the house.—Washington Star.

The Inquisitive Worms.

"I am going for worms," the fisherman said, "but I need no spade. This bottle of soap suds takes its place." Reaching the hollow, he showered the suds upon the ground, moistening a circle five yards in diameter. Then he sat down on a log and filled his pipe. "They'll be up in a minute or so," he said.

Sure enough, by twos and threes the small black worms poked their tiny heads out of the soil and looked inquisitively about. The fisherman gathered them into a bait can.

"It's their curiosity brings them up," he said. "Woodpeckers, knowing this, bring them up by stamping on the soil."

Helped Make History.

Dr. Mary Mills Patrick is at the head of the American College for Girls at Scutari, the Asiatic suburb of Constantinople. It was founded in 1871 as a high school and Dr. Patrick, then little more than a girl herself, became connected with it soon after. Graduates of this college are now helping to shape the history of eastern Europe and the Ottoman Empire. Women of Roumania, Servia, Bulgaria, Persia, Mesopotamia, Egypt and other countries are educated there.

The Meaning.

"What is the meaning of platonic affection?" we inquired. She wrinkled her pretty nose disdainfully. "Its usual meaning," she replied, "is that the young man who talks about it can't afford to marry."
