BECAUSE

We strictly guarantee Puritan Flour. You may use half a sack or more and if it does not reach your expectations—if it does not make the very best bread, cake, biscuit or pie crust that you ever baked—if it does not do all this, bring the rest of the sack back and your grocer will refund you your money. We want you to try this flour at our risk—we are just that positive of your approval and steady patronage thereafter.

it makes more loaves of bread per sack—by baking tests—and better, whiter, lighter loaves than any other flour they can buy. Because they have compared it carefully and found its results a happy contrast to those obtained with other flours.

The distinct flavor—the wholesome taste of the "bigger, whiter, lighter loaves" made from Puritan Flour has brought about its exclusive use in the best Nebraska homes. So great is the demand for our flour that we have grown in a few years from a 200-barrel-a-day-mill to our present output of 2,000 barrels. Our largest increase is yet to come. There is but a one-word reason for this exceptional success—QUALITY.

Christian Citizenship.

A solemn obligation rests upon the Christian to make the business of the nation—the want of his fellows—his business. Too often men are so absorbed in their own personal affairs; and so contemptuous of everything that savors of politics, that they leave the management—manipulation rather—of public affairs to the main—mere berth seekers.

Whenever, in some reform spurt, the people waken to their obligations and privileges as citizens, there is very definite progress made.

In the current Everybody's Magazine, there is an article by Frederick C. Howe, which every citizen should ponder. Among things, he says:

"The trouble with congress is that it does not represent us, the people. It represents only a part of the people. And the task before us, the people, is to make congress represent us; all of us; not a few of us; not a part of us; not even the best of us; but all of us. And the way to make congress represent all of us if for each of us to see to it that his congressman represents him.

That means you. It means me, too, and the other fellow; and some of us will do our part. But everybody I meet seems to have this question on his conscience:

"What can I do?"

Here, then, is something for you to do this year. You can help to make your next congressman represent us. And the way to begin is to ask in your own mind, and then in your own mind to answer, this question:

Does my present congressman represent me?"

Has he distributed the burden of taxation fairly? Has he provided that certain quasi-public functions shall be carried on in the interests of all the people? Has he safeguarded your interests as an agent should? Has he been your delegate in our common business at Washington?

In other words, has he represented you and me?

This, our question, is being asked in one form or another all over the country. It is being asked in the shop, on the farm, in the counting room, and on the street. It is being asked at the primaries and in the conventions. And it is being asked at the polls, in some places. Old agents have been replaced by new ones in Massachusetts, and in New York, because the answer was not satisfactory.

Now you can find the answer to some forms of this question in the Congressional Record by scrutinizing the roll call. The Record does not tell the whole story. It does not tell how measures are strangled in committees, how they are amended and altered; it does not tell the story of the subterranean tricks employed to control the House through Cannon and the Rules, and the Senate through Aldrich. But the Record will tell you what your agent did on critical occasions such as the Rules fight in the House, the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill, and the Wickham railway measure. And you have a right to know this, and to act upon it.

Your congressman at Washington ought to represent you, not only because this is a government of the people, but because you reward him—in honor and money. America is almost the only civilized nation whose government is supported by a sort of poll tax on the people. Except for the recent tax on corporations have gone into the courts to defeat, none of the things taxed in most of the countries of the world—property, wealth, privilege, incomes, inheritances—is naturally taxed in this country. Almost alone, America taxes the weak rather than the strong, necessity rather than ability, consumption rather than wealth.

And the average man pays much more than his share, for he uses almost as much sugar and meat and food stuffs as the rich. He wears almost as many coats and shoes, and uses almost as much tobacco and beer.

This is why I say you support the government at Washington. You pay the members of congress. You pay the pensions, build the warships, contribute to the "Pork Barrel." You are building the Panama Canal and the post offices. You are making the river and harbor improvements. You pay for the president's junkets. For this, if for no other reason, you have a right to expect your agent at Washington to represent you. As a business man, you would discharge him if he did not do so. And if he represented your competitor, or gave away your goods, or plundered your safe, you would not only discharge him, but would set the grand jury in motion to prosecute him as well.

The talented writer of these words is himself an eminent example of the man of conscience and integrity, interesting himself in civic affairs, and this fact adds weight to his earnest words.—Ex.

Community Interests

Did you ever stop to think how much we all depend upon one another. As St. Paul said, "Different members, but all of the same body." If the eye, or the hand, or the foot refuses to do its work the whole body is hampered, and hence one cannot say to the other, "I have no need of thee." The same is true with the varied interests of this community where we live. The farmer, the merchant, the doctor, the lawyer, the banker all depend on one another, and for any one of the number to refuse to recognize this is to throw our whole business machine out of joint. In anger a man says, "I can do business without you." Perhaps he can, but not so good as with "you." To buy goods away from home, or to send your money away from home for deposit is to ignore the claim the community has on you. As bankers we wish to acknowledge this claim always and feel that "turn about is fair play." Your money on deposit with us aids in building up and making more prosperous this community in which you live, and general prosperity always means individual prosperity. We shall be glad to see your name often on the tail end of our checks.
