AN OLD ACQUAINTANCE THE COMERS AND GOERS

DR. MORSMAN TALKS OF CASTOR OIL AND ITS SUE

Castor Oil is a familiar family remedy, very widely used and especially for children not old enough to dictate to their elders.

The oil is obtained from the castor bean by pressure.

The plant is called Ricinus Communis or Palma Christi and it is extensively cultivated in this country.

The "cold pressed" oil is nearly colorless, thick and viscid. It hasn't very much taste, but what it has, isn't good.

In manufacturing oil by the cold pressure process, the beans are freed from hulls and cleaned, then very slightly heated and placed in a hydraulic press and heavy pressure applied. The resulting oil is high colored and rank and must be cleaned and purified by repeatedly mixing with warm water and skimming. This removes the impurities among which is an emetic principle, which cannot be absolutely removed that causes the slight feeling of nausea which is apt to follow a dose of Castor Oil.

This is the only process used in this country for the preparation of high grade oil but a cheap oil is made by boiling the beans in water and skimming off the oil that rises to the surface. No care is taken with this cheap product and it is only used for lubricating purposes.

Great care must be taken in the manufacture of high grade castor oil. Overheating or slight rancidity will spoil the product.

In medical practice the oil has been largely used as a cathartic for so long a time that we are unable to say when it was first used and it is still in high regard among medical men. It is the best and most effective SIMPLE purgative known and finds its greatest beneficial effects in the treatment of the diseases of children. It does not act upon the liver but stimulates the muscular coats of the intestines and the intestinal glands. In some conditions it is almost the only laxative that can be used even for adults, but its special adaptation is to childhood.

The No. 1 Castor Oil of commerce is a very good article and does very well. A little finer oil sold as medicinal castor oil can also be had and the aromatic castor oil sometimes called "tasteless" castor oil is most excellent. This aromatic oil is put up as "Patents" under various names such as "Lax-oil", "Castro-lax," etc. It is medicinal castor oil sweetened with saccharine (sugar can not be used) and flavored with aromatics. An emulsion can be made with sugar and flavorings that is very easily taken but the dose has to be greatly increased.

The greatest drawback to castor oil is the taste and slight nausea it produces. This is pretty well overcome in the aromatic preparation. Castor oil can also be taken easily in milk or hot coffee. It is quite often used (as a laxative) in water) at the fountain.

Capsules of castor oil have not been very successful. The dose is too large for capsules and "Ricinol Grape" a patent medicine claiming to contain castor oil in capsules has something else to increase its activity. Probably aloin, the active principle of aloes.

The dose of castor oil for an adult is half an ounce or one large tablespoonful; for a child of four or five years one teaspoonful. It is not necessary to be very accurate children bear castor oil much better than adults and it is all eliminated and is not dangerous. Castor oil becomes rancid if exposed to the air but will keep for a long time in well corked bottles. Keep your bottle well corked for a very little rancidity develops a rank taste.

The aromatic castor oil does not become rancid readily. This is very much the best preparation to use.

MARKET LETTER.

ent at Kansas City. Letter From our Regular Correspond-

Kansas City Stock Yards, 9-5, 1910. Last week was satisfactory to the selling side in the cattle market, the general market making a net gain of 10 to 15 cents, after a bad start on Monday.

Demand was strong from all the killers, who filled big orders, the protesting that stocks of dressed beef are heavy. The run to-day is 22,000 head, moderate for a holiday in September, but held down somewhat by the fact that to-day is labor-day.

The hog market advanced 33 cents net last week, which makes a total gain of $1.25 per cwt., on an average, in the last four weeks. Heavies have gained more than that, and lights less. Runs are so light that packers have no time to fight the market, but have to scramble to get a decent proportion of their orders filled. Wild predictions are being made as to September markets, some going so far as to say top prices last spring will again be reached. At present the market is as high as any time since last April. Run is 3500 to-day, market 5 to 15 higher light hogs at $9.60 to $9.77, medium weights 9.50 to 9.70, heavies $9.35 to 9.55.
