

THE STATE FAIR A GREAT SUCCESS

The state fair was the most successful in the history of the state in every way. The exhibits were larger and better, and the attendance exceeded all past records by fully 20,000, the street cars handled more people, the railroads sold more tickets, and the fair people came out with a bigger surplus.

All these things show the growth of Nebraska, and the popularity of Lincoln. They disprove the arguments of the soggy-wets that a dry town kills a state fair. It is just as well to acknowledge that.—The State Capital.

DULL MEN

We do not wonder that some critics have represented Mr. Roosevelt's Western tour as a preparation for a presidential campaign in 1912, because we have long ceased to wonder at the appearance of the small-minded man who cannot conceive that a public service is ever rendered without hope of a personal reward. Such men are to be pitied, not blamed. They are dull not corrupt. They have never felt a throb of personal patriotism themselves and therefore cannot recognize it in another. That a man may volunteer to render service to the state in time of peace as well as in time of war is beyond their intellectual power to conceive.—From the Outlook.

RICHARD L. METCALF IS FOR ALDRICH

Richard L. Metcalf has been a leader in the democratic party in this state for nearly a quarter of a century. He has enjoyed to a remarkable degree the friendship and confidence of the men who have framed the policies of his party and have conducted its campaigns during all these years. When such a man declines to follow the order of "party regularity" and in an open letter thru the newspapers tenders his support to the republican candidate for governor, then we can all understand that a new era has dawned in Nebraska politics.

The incident is made all the more significant by the fact that Mr. Dahlman is not personally offensive to Mr. Metcalf. If he consulted his private wishes Mr. Metcalf would prefer to give his support to Mr. Dahlman. If he consulted his present comfort and his political future he would now be supporting the democratic nominee. He takes the thorny road of party irregularity because he sees in the campaign the biggest issue raised in Nebraska in recent years. That is whether the interests that struck down governor Sheldon because he would not follow its counsel and defeated governor Shallenberger because he would not go about the state with the brewery chain about his neck shall now be given the complete control of Nebraska.

Mr. Metcalf declines to be a party to the destruction of popular government in his state, and at enormous personal sacrifice volunteers to do everything he can to ward off the threatening danger and disgrace. It requires more than moral courage to take this step with the cool deliberation shown by Mr. Metcalf than it does to walk up to the cannon's mouth amid the thrill and exaltation of a battle. Applause coming from the republican side may be ignored as partisan and not disinterested, but a large section of the democratic party can be depended upon to give Mr. Metcalf his rightful place as the greatest moral hero thus far developed in this campaign.—Lincoln Journal

WOLFENBARGER AT THE STATE FAIR

"In order to win the most sweeping victory that has ever marked an electoral contest on any issue in the history of this state, it is only necessary to let the people thoroughly understand the question involved.

"It is not a question of personal liberty. That is a farcical piece of political imbecility. We are confronted with an assault on the civil liberties of every man and woman in Nebraska, including even the wives and children of the political debauchers who would hand this state over as a social and economic prison-pen for the starlings of the brewery and distillery.

"It is not a question of home rule, for the brewers' pet candidate for governor wants home rule for his town only, and hell rule for the rest of the state. By his own declarations he would in effect abolish a co-ordinate branch of the state government by depriving it of its legitimate functions of legislation and would substitute the veto power by strangling legislation passed by representatives of the people elected expressly for the purpose of enacting the law.

thus committed social suicide; but let a brewers' political tool who has declared with brutal frankness in advance that he will assume more despotic powers than even the king of England would dare assume in the present century, you are bound by his acts because the people elected him as their governor. This would be true enough if the intelligence and patriotism of the state open-eyed

"But politicians say if you elect it is an unfortunate fact that thousands of blinded, ignorant dupes will vote for any man regardless of his position, fitness, or qualifications, simply because he is on their political party ticket.

"Hence the necessity of making clear the atmosphere of the contest now on. It is not a contest between the democratic and republican parties. It is political but it is not a partisan contest. It is a square open fight between civilization and barbarism; it is a death-grapple between the political hordes of a crime-breeding man-destroying business and the unorganized army of morality, progress and higher ideals of public and private life.

"From a business standpoint, the success of the brewers in elevating their idol to the chief place of power in the state would be worse than any financial panic our state has ever withstood. The grasshopper plague of the seventies would be a children's merry-go-round compared to it. The blustering winds of the dry nineties would be heavenly zephyrs sweeping over the fields; and the moral effect of the success of the brewers' tool would unquestionably result in multiplying the annual number of murders in Nebraska by ten. Business cannot thrive on immorality, vice and crime for the business man has his home and family to protect, and clean society and decent government to him are more than all the money in the world.

"We must not let the dust of the gubernatorial contest blind our eyes to the importance of the legislative tickets in every district. Look to your own district and defeat every brewers' tool that is running on any and every ticket.

"Elect Chester H. Aldrich as Governor and give him the backing of a legislature which will be true to the intelligent and patriotic people of this great state.

Rules For County Correspondents

All copy should reach this office not later than Tuesday afternoon to insure publication.

Hereafter, we shall act on the rule that what is worth doing is worth doing right. Copy must be legible. Carbon copy and manuscript written with an impossible pencil will find the waste basket.

Be accurate, be sure, go to the point at once. Avoid details as much as possible. Get the news that is of general interest, don't use the paper to exploit the family. Observe the golden rule in matters so apparently trivial as the reporting of neighborhood news.

We want the news that is worth while. Discrimination is a fine art. We would encourage its cultivation by our correspondents. We appreciate the helpful service rendered our news department by our excellent corps of correspondents, and it is in the hope of adding to their efficiency that we call attention to these points.

A Good Position.

Can be had by ambitious young men or ladies in the railway or "wireless" telegraph service. Since the eight-hour law became effective, and since the extensive developments of wireless telegraphy, there is a shortage of about 10,000 telegraphers. The Tribune Boosters

The Tribune is organizing a system for more effectively advertising our home industries, products, and scenery. We ask interested parties to meet us half way in this work. We are prepared to print post cards of local views, when proper cuts are furnished. We desire to run a first page local feature in The Tribune each week. All we ask is that parties wishing to have their views printed furnish suitable cuts. We are also contemplating the publishing of an illustrated manual of Richardson county in the near future. We are only hindered from going ahead more rapidly by the initial cost of the work. If each one will contribute his mite it will be possible to produce something that is worth while, and that will awaken a proper appreciation for the things at home. Get a half tone cut of your home or business and join the line of boost-ers.
