

AUTOMOBILES.

They Declare That Automobiles Do Not Cause Hard Times.

Eminent financiers and political economists, so called, have been very much disturbed of late for fear that the automobile would prove the downfall of national prosperity. They are constantly bemoaning the money expended in the purchase and running of automobiles, but might they not turn their thought to the fact that, while large sums have spent in the development of the automobile industry, there are many exceedingly strong points in favor of this industry and its value to the country? Might they not, on the other hand, turn their attention to the fact that his country annually spends about $2,500,000,000 for strong drink, which has not one redeeming thing in its favor?

Are we financially going to the dogs because we are spending per chance a few hundred million dollars a year on automobiles, which are helping to develop the country, helping to build good roads, helping to cause the broadening of national life by greater travel, and yet are not suffering, at least we are not told so by the same financiers and political economists, from the money drain of the $2,500,000,000 spent on drink? The automobile builds no jails, nor penitentiaries; creates no necessity for enlarged police force, and builds no almshouses. The manufacture of the automobile gives employment to many thousands of skilled laborers, creates a demand for cotton and iron and steel and aluminum. It makes a market for the diversified products of the farm, and it awakens the whole country to a broader national life by the mingling of the people of all sections through travel. It is the greatest factor in the development of good roads, and good roads mean advancement in education, in religious activities, in business development, in enhanced value of farms, in the better cultivation of land, in lessening the burden of transportation to and from the farm and thus increasing prosperity of the farmers. Good roads mean the elimination of the loneliness of country life and the turning back of population from congestion in cities to country life again. Good road building means more than material development; it is really a moral issue, because of its great effect upon land.

The automobile has these things in its favor. On the other hand drink which costs the country ten times as much as the automobile has nothing in its favor. It builds almshouses, jails and penitentiaries. It is the chief factor in requiring the maintenance of a great police force. Instead of building up health as does the out door life of the automobile it destroys health. It destroys life and the cost of strong drink to the country instead of being two and a half billion expended by the consumer, is probably twice as much in the aggregate through the enormous expenditures in the building and maintenance of jails, almshouses and penitentiaries, the burden put upon the land by this mighty curse.

We have not, however, seen any agitation on the part of the great rich about any panic coming by reason of drink, though they are free in their predictions of a panic by reason of the automobile. Is this due to shallowness of reasoning, which mark many of the statements put out by these so-called authorities? Or is it due to the fact that the man who has been able, as a railroad president, or a great financier, to ride in his palace car, is not willing to see the ordinary every day man able to ride in equal comfort in the motor car? At any rate, whatever may be the cause, may it not be well for those who are decrying the development of the motor car industry to give consideration to the fact that the nation's loss through drink is certainly ten times as great as the amount that is being expended for automobiles? On one side there are great benefits; on the other side there is a curse beyond the power of words to depict. — Manufacturers Record, Baltimore.
