A man has not done his whole duty when he has cast his ballot. It is equally important that he vote right.

Every bad man in Nebraska will vote to elect Dahلمان, that is why every good man should vote to defeat him.

Vote early. Don't put it off until late and then, miss altogether because it happens to rain or you are too busy.

To vote right, challenges the best that is in a man. It calls for familiarity with men and issues, and intelligent discrimination.

What is worth doing, is worth doing right. When you vote see to it that you vote to uphold your manhood and your claim to horse-sense and sound judgment.

Vote. Vote for your home and the things that make for the peace and prosperity of your home. Vote for your community and its progress. And vote for the greater Nebraska.

There is no such thing as throwing your vote away. Whether your vote is for the winning or losing side, it counts as your personal protest against the wrong, or as your voice in favor of the right.

"I declare and defy any man to disprove the assertion, that county option is undemocratic. Is there any county option democrat in this crowd? I just wish you would stand up. I would like a photograph of you to hang up in my office. I want to see just how narrow you are between the eyes. Oh, you county optionists, you will think you have been up against a buzz-saw when you get thru with Jimmie Dahلمان. I promise you that I will come out of my city, the great metropolitan city of Omaha, with 15,000 majority. And if you people do as you should we will celebrate that night, and we won't go home until after midnight either. We will all go on a tear and celebrate. What do you think of that?"—James Dahلمان.

Flooded With Literature.

Richardson County in the last few weeks has been flooded with literature intended to make votes for Dahلمان. One thing is a surprise to us, and that is the brewers and distilling interests have singled out especially the German votes. Are the German people so easily influenced to cast their vote for a man like Dahلمان, who is a lawless mortal, who boasts of his unrestrained lawlessness? The German has been better thought of by his friends than to be very largely stampeded to this crowd.

The above named powers in politics, who have sworn vengeance to Governor Shallenberger because he signed the Daylight law, are now up in arms and want to disgrace the fair name of the state of Nebraska. We trust that our county will speak in no uncertain tone whether they be German or otherwise when the time to vote comes.

What it Does Not Do.

County Option does not close a saloon; it gives the people a chance to do so.

County option is not an arbitrary measure; it presents to the people two systems for controlling the liquor traffic and lets them choose the one they prefer.

County option is not prohibition. It simply submits to the people of the county the question of county prohibition. If a majority of the people in the county are in favor of no saloons they ought to have a chance to say so. If a majority of the people in the county are in favor of saloons the same law will give them a chance to say so.

County option does not interfere with personal liberty. On the other hand the man who is against county option is a foe to personal liberty on the tax question. The people of a county pay the tax that pays the salary of the county officials, whose chief business is to look after the mischief caused by saloons. The man who is opposed to county option is opposed to letting the taxpayers have a voice on the one question that most concerns their taxes.—Nebraska Issue.

W. J. BRYAN'S STAND.

Mr. Bryan's stand at the last democratic convention could not be other than he did take in the matter of county option. Mr. Bryan's slogan "let the people rule," that had been his watchword through a number of years would have been meaningless. County option is nothing more or less than this. Every farmer is to have a vote whether a county shall have saloons or not. If the people are for the wets, so will it be, but however if the sentiment is for the dry, so will it be. Let the people rule, especially the farmers. Certainly the farmers ought to be for it, as it increases his powers to have or not to have saloons. We think it is the most fair proposition that could be offered. It is indeed the much treasured principal of all true democracy of the majority rule.

Standing of the Candidates.

The following candidates have agreed to support the Miller-Curtis bill, which is designed to prevent inter-state commerce laws from nullifying state laws on the liquor question:

- For United States senator—Elmer J. Burkett.
- For Congressman, First District—William Hayward.
- For Governor—Chester A. Aldrich.
- For Lieutenant governor—M. P. Hopewell.
- For state senator—W. T. Johnson
- For State Representatives—Cass Jones, Don Gridley, M. J. Schaible.

JOHNSON vs. MOREHEAD.

Every voter in Richardson county owes it to Pawnee county to vote for W. T. Johnson, candidate for state senator from this district. This is not so much a question of what these men stand for as of courtesy and fair-play. Richardson county can not afford to be little and mean in this matter. It is Pawnee county's turn and we should be as fair with them as they were two years ago when it was our turn. W. T. Johnson is everything that any voter can desire of a congressional candidate. There is absolutely no call for a candidate from Richardson county. Let every fair-minded voter see to it that we play fair with Pawnee in this matter.

J.W. CRABTREE.

The candidacy of Prof. J. W. Crabtree for the office of State Superintendent of Public Instructions is one that commends itself in the highest degree to the rank and file of both school men and school patrons interested in the progress of the schools of our state.

Among the teachers of the state there is perhaps no other man so well known.

During the seven year that Mr. Crabtree was inspector of the schools for the University of Nebraska, he had the opportunity of coming into the closest touch, not only with the faculty of the state university and all the many high schools in the state, but also with the faculties of all the other colleges and normal schools. This splendid opportunity for discovering the conditions and needs of all the various public educational institutions of the state, Mr. Crabtree made wise use of, it seeming ever to be his purpose not only to know personally the men and women who were carrying on the work of the schools, but to seek ways to help them to increase their efficiency and to make their schools stronger. There are many teachers and superintendents in all parts of the state who feel that much of their success has been due to his kindly interest and wise counsel at critical times in their careers.

Mr. Crabtree is a man of strong personality, a personality that inspires the best efforts of those who work under his direction. He has a broad way of looking at things, a keen perception and sympathetic understanding of the difficulties under which teachers and superintendents are working.

Mr. Crabtree is to a large extent and in the very best sense of the word self-made, his parents having been pioneer Cass county farmers, and his common school education having been obtained by alternately working on his father's farm and attending country school until he entered the state normal of which institution he is a graduate.

While carrying on his work at the state normal, he spent some time teaching country schools to help pay the expenses of his education. At other times he chopped wood and did chores for the professors, and during summer worked as a farm hand. This is the way of getting an education that develops the best quality of manhood, develops men, ready and capable for service to the world.

The excellence of Mr. Crabtree's work as country teacher attracted the attention of the school board of Ashland, who offered him a position in the Ashland high school. After one year in that position he was advanced to the superintendency where his work was so successful that, that period is looked back upon in Ashland as an epoch in its school history.

From Ashland he went to the state university as instructor in mathematics, then into the principalship of the Beatrice high school, from which position, however, he was soon recalled by the university and made instructor of the high schools. After an experience of seven years in that position he was elected to the presidency of the State Normal school at Peru, a position which he held for six years and would still hold had he not been too big and broad a man to let petty, narrow partizanship dictate to him in his management of the institution under his charge.

Mr. Crabtree, while a republican in politics, believes and has testified to that belief by the sacrifice of a position, that the educational institutions of our state, both great and small should be run not in the interest of narrow partizanship, at the dictates of ward politicians, but in the interests solely of the educational well-fare of the youth of this great state.

COMMON SENSE POLITICS.

"The misapplication of sound principle is a temporary evil, but the application of an unsound principle is a permanent wrong."

Please read the foregoing quotation a second time and get its full meaning and then we will tell you who said it.

Have you read it again? All right, it was said by the great progressive,

Senator Cummings of Iowa, last week in an appeal for a republican congress

When you come to apply the philosophy of the above statement to the congressional situation it should appeal to every republican in the nation.

Mr. Maguire publishes a platform which contains, among other things, a statement that he voted against the tariff bill. This is done to lure republicans who think the tariff bill wrong in application to support him.

The reason why republicans oppose the present tariff is that it is, in some measure a mis-application of the principal of a protective tariff, while the reason Maguire voted against the bill is that he is opposed to the protective theory.

Abraham Lincoln made the first republican tariff speech when he said, "I know but little of the philosophy of the tariff; I do know however that if I buy a suit of clothes in England, that England will have the money, and America will have the clothes, while if I buy the clothes in America we will have the clothes and the money too."

This plain, common sense view of the protective theory has been enacted into law by the republican party and the result has been that this nation has been builded into an empire, stronger, wealthier and mightier than any other nation in the world.

We have had experiences with the other theory. Maguire's theory, and the result was poverty, commercial stagnation, distress and national disaster.

In those days corn sold in Falls City for 12 cents a bushel, fat cattle at $3.50, hogs from $3.00 to $4.00, wheat at 40 cents, and such prices continued until William McKinley was elected and the republican idea of a protective tariff was again enacted into law. Congressman Maguire voted against the tariff bill because he is unalterably opposed to the protective idea. He believes in the democratic tariff for revenue, which has been repeatedly demonstrated as unsound.

Republicans should remember that while Maguire voted against the tariff because it was protective in its nature he will, if elected, vote for any tariff which is not protective. Such a tariff has always meant disaster to the farmers of the middle west and always will.

Will Hayward is in favor of the protective idea and will support a measure that properly applies it.

Maguire is opposed to the protective idea and will vote against any measure that applies it properly or otherwise. The personal welfare of every voter in Richardson county is concerned in the congressional election, and every voter who wants corn and wheat and hogs and cattle kept at their present level should vote for Hayward.

DON'T FORGET.

Governor Shallenberger in his recent address referred to the tremendous power our state laws intrust to the governor. It excels that of the crowned kings of England or Germany. The provision our law makes in regard to the power of pardon, is if things be normal, a wise and necessary provision; however if the governor should happen to be an abnormal man, as for instance Governor Patterson of Tennessee, who pardoned the cold blooded murderer of Senator Carmack, one can see to what it may lead. Can be seen that the language of Shallenberger is a timely warning to the people of Nebraska. The history of Mayor Dahلمان has been just along this line. He will draw his greatest support from the criminal class. "Don't Forget," Dahلمان will not forget his friends. We just call our readers attention to a letter of Dahلمان to his "friend" Ma-bray, the outlaw of this state.

P. S. Heacock is improving gradually. He is able to be about the house and if the weather continues good he will soon be about again.

Mr. and Mrs. Silas P. Gist were down from Salem last Saturday the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Guy Greenwald.

Mrs. Mary Kaiser of Omaha is visiting her sister, Mrs. Peter Kaiser, this week having arrived Saturday.

WILLIAM HAYWARD
William Hayward, born, reared and educated in the First Congressional district of Nebraska, aspires to represent "home folks" in congress. Every year of his natural life has been spent in battling for republican principles along progressive lines. He is not a politician nor an office seeker, he is only a fine, ambitious Nebraska young man who wants all things to be right, and desires an opportunity to help make and keep them right. He has held but one elective office, that of county judge, to which he was elected in a democratic count by over 1,000 majority. In the recent primary election he carried his county by a vote of 1,264 to 102. They seem to think pretty well of him at home, don't they? Mr. Hayward stands today as one of the most promising young men in the middle west, of clean personal life, admirable habits and unusual mental gifts, the people of this district are to be congratulated upon having a candidate so splendidly equipped.

On Friday and Saturday evening, Nov. 11 and 12, there will be a tremendous display of curios and other material from China which have been gathered by the Drs. Tucker during their eight years residence in that country, and on their 1,000 miles journey on horse back. There are six large boxes of these goods which will be arranged for exhibition and a nominal sum of ten cents admission will be charged all adults, and on Saturday afternoon all school children will be admitted from two until five o'clock at five cents each. This will be an educational feature seldom possible to the people of any community in our country to attend.
