The Tribune received this week another job press and some new material which will be used handily in caring for our rapidly increasing business.

Carnegie's big peace fund does not seem to bother any of the nations. Turkey, Spain, France, Russia, Austria, and several of the smaller republics, are all preparing for war in case they don't get what they want.

The republican party has emerged from worse situations than the present one, and proved much stronger than ever. With both parties hopelessly divided on the tariff question, Bryan seems to be bent on either moving his way or keeping the democratic party divided. The republicans are turning out their legislators who block progress. The democrats are winning just now by progressing backward. Which play will win in the end may easily be surmised. The success of a party does not necessarily follow an election at the polls. It is easier to promise than to fulfill. And the democrats sure have a stack of promise on file somewhere, dating back for many years.

How many people have noted the queer names given to Pullman cars? Do you know where they originate? It is said that at one time the names were actually beautiful and signified something, but that the man who was hired by the company to furnish them ran out of material, and lost his job. He brooded over his troubles until he became hopelessly insane, and is now confined in a straight jacket and padded cell, where from morning till night he shouts forth names like "Myopia," "Deeprorant," etc., and the pullman company has a phonograph supplied with blank records and placed where it will record his mad ravings. The names suggested in his frenzy are then transferred to the sides of the long sleeping cars, to become the wonder of all.

TORNADO NEAR STELLA

STORM STRUCK ABOUT FOUR P. M. WEDNESDAY

Severe Wind Does Big Damage Near Stella and Surrounding Country

Stella, April 13—The most destructive tornado that ever visited this section was yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock when the barn and house were Irvin B. Jarrett lived on Arthur Shellenberger's farm were destroyed. The parents and two children in the house were not injured. The furniture in the house was wrecked, but five mules were left standing in their stalls unhurt.

Most of George Helmick's out buildings were destroyed. The house was damaged and many hogs were killed.

At Barney Sheffield's on the Jared Sumner farm the house was unroofed and other damage done.

Some damage was done at Arthur Pohl's on J. H. Holland's farm.

There was no damage done in Stella. The storm passed east of the Stella cemetery. Three different clouds were seen, two of which struck the earth. Hail and a hard rain in the afternoon followed by a heavy wind which blew all day.

LIGHTNING DOINGS

STRUCK NEAR THE NEW CATHOLIC CHURCH

No Damage Was Done To The Building But The Workmen Were Stunned

Yesterday afternoon while the light shower of rain passed over Falls City a bolt of lightning went down by the new Catholic church. No damage was done to the building, but the working men were quite unceremoniously brought to their knees. Fortunately no one was hurt. All escaped with a good scare, and to take with them the memory through life that there is nothing trifling in the Almighty's thunderbolts.

PRELIMINARY POSTPONED

THE BRIGMON CASE SET FOR APRIL 20

Young Man Is Committed To Jail Without Bail Until That Time

At the request of his attorneys, the preliminary hearing of Con Brigmon, will not occur until April 20, his attorneys requesting time in which to prepare a defense. It seems that Mr. Brigmon has a number of friends in this city, who are convinced of his innocence and will secure the best legal talent to fight the case.

The young man will be held without bail until after he has had his hearing, at which time he will be bound over to the district court if the evidence is strong enough to warrant such a proceeding.

Mr. Brigmon has relatives in this city, although he is a comparative stranger. He is a nephew of Isaac Brigmon, who is well known here.

We understand that a prominent law firm from St. Joe will have charge of the defense, and that a hot legal fight will ensue. The progress of the case will be watched with much interest by our citizens, inasmuch as the outcome is much in doubt.

We do not wish to express an opinion before the trial as to the guilt or innocence of the accused, but will be glad to chronicle the fact in case Mr. Brigmon is able to disprove the serious charge which rests against him, as his friends are confident he will be able to do.

SLEEP.

What is sleep? The wisest man in the world does not know. Although we pass half our lives in that state, it is as much a mystery as it was in the days of Nineveh.

We only know the body lies inert, the muscles relaxed and the nerves quiescent for a time. The objects of the material world are shut out by the curtains of the eyelids, and there is no activity in the objective mind. But—Only a part of us sleeps.

A part of the mind—the psychologists call it "the subjective mind"—is watchful and alert. It carefully supervises the functions that are carried on during sleep.

The objective mind—or is it the soul—where does it go? Who knows?

Does it sometimes wander in the garden of immortality? We can neither affirm nor deny the statement.

We only know this:

If we go to sleep when the mind is fretted with the worries of the day we do not rest so well as we do when the mind is composed. We sleep fitfully and arise unrefreshed.

It is a fine conception and borne out by experience that the mind, if properly directed, will go to work during sleep to restore the body.

If the mind is distracted and torn by anxiety it appears to go about the work of recuperating itself and leaves the body to take care of itself.

What fountain of recuperation does it find? And where?

However, when conditions are right and the mind is directed to the task before sleep it seems to put forth its best endeavors to heal and help its partner, the body.

If you do not believe this, try it. You will be convinced if you give the experiment a trial.

It is this sort of sleep that is "nature's sweet restorer" that "knits up the raveled sieve of care" and gives the body the feeling of refreshment.

Therefore the importance of a proper frame of mind before you enter the precincts of Sleepland.

Especially should children go to sleep with happy thoughts. It is one of the cruellest things to send a child sobbing to his sleep.

Dispel every form of worry before you sleep.

Leave the mind—or soul?—free to do its offices of restoring the body or to wander at its will in the universe of God.

A TORNADO WRECKED A HOME

Occupants Were Asleep When Storm Struck and Were Carried up Bodily by the Wind.

Frederick, Ok., April 12.—In a tornado which swept across the country two miles southeast of this city the home of B. W. Hensley, a farmer, was demolished and its occupants scattered over the adjoining fields. James F. Smith of this city, who was visiting at the Hensley home, was killed when struck by flying timbers. Mr. Hensley, his wife and two young sons were injured.

All the members of the family were in bed when the roar of wind came and the house was torn to pieces. Some were whirled up bodily in their beds and carried through the air. The storm blew up from the northwest in a few moments and lasted not more than five minutes. It was followed by a heavy rain. It is believed none of those injured will die.
