ESCAPED THE HANGMAN.

Ben Jonson, For Manslaughter, Was Sentenced to Be Branded.

The present sessions house has been used for the work of the country for a hundred years and contains records and other historical documents which go back to the year 1549, when Edward VI. was king, and a representative of the London Globe was privileged to examine some of them. Perhaps the most interesting is the original indictment of Ben Jonson for manslaughter. The name, by the way, is spelled Johnson. Ben Jonson was arraigned at the Old Bailey in October, 1598, for the manslaughter of Gabriel Spencer in a duel at "Shordiche with a certain sword of iron and steel called a rapier of the price of 3s., which he then and there had in his right hand and held drawn, feloniously and willfully struck the same Gabriel then and there with the aforesaid sword, giving to the same Gabriel Spencer in and upon the same Gabriel's right side a mortal wound of the depth of six inches and of the breadth of one inch, of which mortal wound the same Gabriel Spencer then and there died instantly."

The document is headed with a statement that the prisoner "confesses the indictment, asks for the book, reads like a clerk, is marked with the letter T and is delivered according to the form of the statute," etc. This in modern language means that the author of "Every Man In His Humor" claimed the privilege of the clergy, which was extended to laymen who could read, of escaping the hangman for a first offense on being branded on the left thumb with a T, which was commonly known as the Tyburn T. Ben Jonson, apparently by bribing the jailer, had the operation of branding performed with cold steel, as no marks of branding were found on his body at his death.

This remarkable document, which escaped the poet's biographers, was found among a number of fragmentary rolls. It had lost its dated wrapper, was wet and decayed and was far on the road to rotteness when it was rescued from its oblivion and submitted by the experts of the Middlesex county council to a process of cleaning and restoring.

Lindley Murray In Spirit Land.

Some spiritualists were at one time very anxious to persuade the famous novelist, Charles Dickens, to become a spiritualist. He was on one occasion induced to attend a seance so that he might be converted to their cult. He was asked whose spirit he would most like to appear, and he said at once, "Lindley Murray."

In due course they informed him that the famous master of grammar was in the room. Dickens asked, "Are you Lindley Murray?" and the "spirit" answered, "I am." All hope of making Charles Dickens a spiritualist was gone from that moment.—Liverpool Post.

First Judicial Honors For a Woman.

To Henry VIII. belongs the honor of having conferred judicial rights upon a woman. Lady Anne Berkeley of York was allowed by the sovereign, who had the widest experience of the virtues of women, to sit as judge, appoint a commission and actually to pass sentence on some men who had been killing her deer and despoiling her park.

Going Him One Better.

"Oh, yes, we have a wonderful climate," said the man from southern Texas. "Why, only last season we raised a pumpkin so large that after sawing it in two my wife used the halves as cradles in which to rock the babies."

"Yes," replied the man from New York, "but in my state it's a common thing to find three full grown policemen asleep on one beat."—Lippincott's.

Too Early For Him.

One raw March morning as a professor at one of the colleges was calling the roll of an 8 o'clock class in English he came to "Mr. Robbins," and, receiving no answer, call again, "Mr. Robbins!"

Still no reply. "Ah," said the professor, looking around upon the class with a smile, "I suppose it is rather early for Robbins."—Ladies' Home Journal.
