Money To Loan on Improved Farms

A large per cent of our wealthy citizens can trace their financial success to borrowed capital. Many a man is kept from enjoying this valuable asset to business life because of the embarrassment in arranging for a loan of this kind among home folks, where the business is everybody's business and the knowledge of such a transaction is liable to injure one's credit. To avoid such unpleasantness, I shall be pleased to place my funds at your disposal at a reasonable rate of interest. The same will apply if you wish to renew a loan. We can do the business quickly and safely through the mails if inconvenient to call at my office. Address

WASHINGTON, June 9.

The spectacle of perfect organization among the democrats in the house is the thing that is worrying the republican leaders as they contemplate the 1912 situation. The latest example of what organization can accomplish is afforded by the house democratic caucus on the wool tariff. In this instance, the members on the democratic side seemingly divided hopelessly, went into a meeting and instead of throwing brickbats and coming to blows got through a resolution on which both the friends and the enemies of a duty on raw wool were able to stand and present at least a semblance of peace and unity. It had been hoped by the republicans that the democrats would split irreparably over the question of a tariff on raw wool. The republicans, therefore, are deeply disappointed over the outcome. They are beginning to fear that the democrats are not going to make any bad breaks prior to 1912 and that the result may be the election of a democratic president, a democratic senate and another democratic hour.

Shrewd observers perceive, of course, that the democrats are in reality badly split over the question of tariff. More particularly there is a wide division of opinion over the question of free raw materials. But from the standpoint of practical politics, the question that is facing the republican leaders is whether the democrats are going to be able to conceal their differences in the main until after the 1912 campaign.

Some indications are given that the democrats will be able to do this. The house democratic leaders in particular are bending every effort in this direction. That is why they are so mad at Bryan for stirring up the free raw wool issue. They say in effect to Bryan: "Everything was running smoothly until you butted in. Why on earth can't you keep out?"

Bryan, of course, has no patience with the doctrine of protection, disguised either as a duty on raw materials or as tariff for revenue. And not being given to expediency, he talks out in meeting just when Underwood, Clark, et al., want the house democrats to gumshoe along quietly and create no needless perturbation about issues.

But having for the time quieted things as to wool, the house leaders hope there will be peace. As the result of their efforts, most of the house democrats are fully convinced that the one thing of supreme importance now is to have the democratic party win in 1912 and that for reason individuals should subordinate their views and promote the party welfare. That is why the leaders are able to call caucuses on important matters and bind practically the entire democratic membership to a certain course of action.

Hit or Get Hit.

Saturday afternoon one of the exciting games of the so far advanced season was played in the ball game between the Foresters and Clarinda. Being the last game of the series of three held here last week, and each team having won one each, made this the decisive game and very interesting. Each team did splendid work and both pitchers were hit hard.

Berts and Harmony were the battery announced for Clarinda, while Finch and Vanderhill started the game for Falls City. During the game, however, both pitchers were changed, Smithson taking the box for Clarinda and Woods twirling the ball for Falls City. Many phenomenally safe hits were made by both sides and two home runs were the result with a large number of three-baggers. One of Clarinda's men run in the first home run and Bobby McCabe positively could not let any one beat him so the next time he got a chance he landed a clean, safe hit over the left foul line and straight out over the fielder's head. His race around the bases resembled nothing so much as a streak of lightning. The score finally resulted in favor of Falls City at 9 to 4.

"God Save the King."

We have no real knowledge of "God Save the King" before the rebellion of '45, when it became a popular loyalist song, but tunes of the same shape had existed long before. One is to be found in a book "Ayres," dated 1619, by Dr. John Bull, and another as a minuet by Purcell. According to another theory, the tune of "God Save the King" used to be sung in James II's private chapel to a Latin hymn beginning "O Deus Optime," and after the revolution of 1688 was preserved by members of the Stuart family, till it was performed publicly about 1742, on the birthday of the princess of Wales. It is interesting to find that the words "God save the king" are in Coverdale's Bible of 1535, and seem to have been used there as a familiar phrase rather than a translation. "God save the king," according to Froude, was a watchword in the royal navy in 1545, the counter-sign being "Long to reign over us."—Country Life.

Turnips, Lamb—and Mutton.

We traveled with one of those troublesome fellow-passengers in a stage coach that is called a well-informed man. For 20 miles we discoursed about the properties of steam, probabilities of carriage by ditto, till all my science, and more than that was exhausted, and I was thinking of escaping my torment by getting up on the outside, when, getting into Bishop's Stortford, my gentleman, spying some farming land, put an unlucky question to me—"what sort of a crop of turnips I thought we should have this year." Emma's eyes turned to me to know what in the world I could say, and she burst out into a violent fit of laughter, maugre, her pale, serious cheeks, when, with greatest gravity I replied that "it depended, I believed, upon boiled legs of mutton."—Charles Lamb.

Rights of the Child.

Mrs. E. R. Weeks of Kansas City, well known in club circles of Missouri, was elected one of the vice-presidents of the Mothers' congress. Dr. Jeanette Bolles of Denver said at the last session of the convention that it had taken 20 centuries for parents to learn that it is a good rule that works both ways and that the commandment should read to them, "Honor thy son and thy daughter." She said it is a baby's right to be well born of healthy parents, who know how to care for themselves and their offspring.

Neglected wounds produce old sores and these in time develop ulcers which eat away the vitality.

Ballard's Snow Liniment

Is a Healing Remedy for All Ailments of the Flesh of Man and Beast.

The speed with which this splendid liniment heals up a bad wound or sore has surprised and pleased those who were accustomed to the slower and uncertain effect of less powerful remedies. It mends the lacerated flesh so quickly that there is but little time lost from work. In relieving rheumatic pains, neuralgia, sciatica, it has done and is doing a wonderful work. Many chronic victims of these diseases have found to their great satisfaction that it cures an attack in a fraction of the time required by the ordinary treatment. It is equally effective in the flesh ailments of animals. Owners of blooded stock value it highly for two reasons: It heals sores and wounds quickly, and leaves no disfiguring scars. This remedy is needed in every home. Its great power and efficacy was generally known, no family would be without it.
