

MADERO THE MAN

Red Cross Executive Describes Personality of Now Famous Mexican Leader.

"In Francisco I. Madero one sees no trace of the military leader," says Ernest P. Bicknell, National Director of the American Red Cross, who has just returned from the Mexican border, where the Red Cross is caring for Mexican refugees and wounded Mexican soldiers. "In physique he is unimpressive, in manner quiet and unaggressive. His expression is pleasing and gentle. In conversation his face lights up and one sees in him the idealist, the dreamer. Instinctively one feels the absolute sincerity of the man and is prepared to believe him capable of the greatest sacrifice for his people and country. But there is no suggestion of the fanatic. That he is a man of education and culture is always apparent, and his use of the English language many educated Americans might well envy. It is impossible not to believe that he must have resorted to arms and warfare with the greatest reluctance, and one questions whether he could control and direct extensive military operations, with the opportunities which they afford for the play of passion and the selfish aggrandizement of ambitious leaders.

"Of many of the officers in command of the insurrecto forces which captured Juarez, a wholly different characterization is inevitable. Motives are too subtle for cursory discovery, but the impression one gains from observing some of these men is that they are primarily adventurers, inspired by love of excitement and change, or by an ambition for power or plunder. The cessation of hostilities and declaration of peace were not welcome to these men, and no one familiar with conditions will be surprised if some of these rebel leaders continue to be a source of disorder and obstruction to the reforms which Madero is hoping to effect.

"No sooner was Juarez taken and peace in sight than jealousies broke out between the Mexican insurrecto army leaders and the foreigners, who, as officers or privates, had joined the rebel ranks. Many Americans of the insurrecto army were charged with looting Juarez after the city was taken and were forced to flee across the river to El Paso. By other means, also, a process of elimination began which promises soon to clear the ranks of the foreign element, whose services had been joyfully welcomed while there was fighting to be done. Any sentiment of indignation at this apparent injustice is tempered by the commonly accepted belief that the motives leading a majority of the Americans to take up the insurrecto cause were not wholly altruistic. There can be no question, however, that the reckless daring of these Americans was a large factor in the insurrecto success."

COURT HOUSE NEWS.

Mrs. Cora Meredith of Salem was a caller at the office of the county treasurer Saturday morning.

J. O. Horton of Salem was a court house visitor Saturday.

The Directors of the school boards of the county called on Superintendent Oliver at his office Saturday. Among them were Chris. Kammerer, D. D. Waggoner of near Rulo, H. E. Lemon of District 74, south of town.

DIED.

Carl Frederick Fischer died at his home in this city, Thursday, June 29, 1911, aged 68 years, 5 months and 14 days.

Mr. Fischer was born in Prussia, Jan. 15, 1843. The funeral was held from the house Sunday, July 2, at 10 o'clock, interment being at the Steele cemetery.

Miss Inez Holstein left for Quincy, Ill., Friday for a summer visit with relatives and friends.

DIDN'T WANT TO FACE THEM.

Judge—Five years for bigamy. Prisoner—You'd better make it during the lives of my wives, judge.

Defined.

An optimist is just a wight who wakes up on a gray day and smiles as much, from morn to night, as if it were a May day.

Revenge.

"I had such a good time the other day watching my wife's discomfiture." "Nice thing to say. How was it?" "She is so hard and fast in her rules about the house—won't even allow me a cigarette. Well, the chimney began in the morning and smoked all day in spite of her."

Its Business.

"I don't see why you folks in this police court keep a barometer to tell the weather by."

"Why not?" "Because every day in a police court is a fine day."

A Vain Effort.

"Did Tupper understand much of Sarah Bernhardt's performance in French?"

"No. He carried along a bill of fare printed in French, but it didn't seem to help him much."

In His Own Defense.

The Prisoner at the Bar—Now, I asks yer, gents of the jury, if I'd got away with all that swag, like they say I did, d'yer s'pose I'd have hired this here little $15 lawyer t' defend me?—Puck.

A Pessimist.

"So you believe the worst is yet to come?" "Yes. This year's Fourth of July celebration is still on the calendar of future events."

UNCONVENTIONALITIES.

"Is that a new hat, Mr. Slowgo? Please put it on and let me see how a rear view of it looks."

"Of course, I'll review your new book if you wish, Mr. Borus, but I can tell you without reading it that it's rotten."

"Mr. Means, you know perfectly well that I am marrying you because you are rich and in feeble health."

"This little delay in cashing your counter check, sir, is to give the paying teller time to ascertain your bank balance and to find out whether or not the signature is genuine."

"You oughtn't to talk so much, Blobbs; your voice is disagreeable and your conversation bores me."

"Yes, sir, I remember your face quite well; I was in hopes I never would see it again."

"You don't look a bit like your younger sister, Miss Tiggie; she's handsome."

Wifely Sympathy.

The coarse, burly ruffian was on trial for whipping his wife.

The testimony against him was direct and conclusive.

"Prisoner," said the indignant police justice, "there is no use in imposing a fine, for your poor wife would work her fingers off to pay it for you. I shall send you to the workhouse for 60 days."

"Your honor," protested the weeping woman, "that ain't half enough! You ought to send him for six months!"

The Uplift.

"Have you taken up the city beautiful idea out here?" asked the stranger.

"Yep," replied the native, "we're goin' to pave Main street this spring, and some of the folks are tryin' to have the waterin' trough in front of the courthouse decorated with a statute of Physis."

Short Measure.

"Do you use condensed milk at your house?"

"I guess so. We order a quart a day and the milkman squeezes it into a can that holds about a pint."

NO DECISION.

Dad and George were engaged in one of their interminable disputes over the past and present.

"Anyway," said George, "we dance better than you did."

"Dance!" sputtered dad. "That ain't dancing. Here, let me show you."

And he began turning round like a teetotum, and then the rug on the polished floor slipped from under him and he came down with a crash that shook all the magazines from the library table.

"Let me show you," cried George, and he gave a skip and a slide that carried him clear under the piano and banged his head savagely against the rosewood stool.

And the question remains undecided.
