seated the card players. A dozen or more guests attended the shower.

Delmar Yardley, an employee at the Norfolk Packing company, received slight injuries and almost became electrocuted Tuesday afternoon, but due to quick thinking and action his life was spared. While about his duties, Delmar stepped on the steam pipe at the factory, reached up to get hold of the conveyor and suddenly found that, due to a short in the wiring, it was charged and he was forced to hang there. He called for help and electricity at the factory was turned off, thus saving his life.
