ALL SIGNS POINT TO AN EGG SHORTAGE

A large number (estimated 60 or 70%) of the laying hens in the country are going to market. In addition vast numbers (estimated 70 or 75%) of the pullets are underdeveloped and undernourished.

What Does This Indicate? Simply this: There is great likelihood of a short fall and winter egg supply. As a result egg prices should be good. DON'T NEGLECT your pullets now and then wonder why some people get lots of eggs and you don't. FEED them Wayne Egg Mash—or Wayne Supplements used with your own farm grains.
