Eight pullets from eight different poultry flocks have been placed in an egg-laying battery and the pullet that lays the most eggs, starting next Tuesday morning and ending on Tuesday night, December 9, will earn $1 a dozen for her owner. All pullets selected for this test are from the flocks of Brink Hatchery baby chick purchasers.

HENS KEPT IN WIRE CAGES ALL TIME

Many folks have never had an opportunity to see an egg-laying battery in which hens are kept in wire cages all of the time and will learn much from this demonstration of a new and successful way of caring for large numbers of birds in a small floor space.

WAYNE FEEDS AND LAYING MASH

Ordinary farm grains, combined with Wayne Feeds and Laying Mash will be fed all eight pullets!

From time to time, in these ads, we will bring you news of progress and the egg records of the different hens in the contest.

All Persons Interested Invited to Stop in Any Time

The contest will demonstrate how some poultrymen get a heavy production of eggs early in the fall when egg prices are always high! Remember we will pick up your Poultry and Cream free, paying top market price at all times!
