

Report a Big Corn Yield Over Most of County

Albert Todd of Near This City Gains Recognition from DeKalb Company for High Yield.

Albert B. Todd, Plattsmouth, Nebraska, farmer, has just harvested one of the highest corn yields produced in the state this year, and has entered it in the 1940 DeKalb national corn growing contest.

Todd's certified yield of 112.1 bushels of corn per acre is expected to place him high in the county and state as well, his yield will automatically be entered in the national division to compete for the grand championship.

Todd's big crop will produce as much corn from 5 acres as the average farmer in the United States harvests from 18 and is one of the largest reported in the country this fall.

Todd grew the crop with hybrid seed corn, DeKalb 825 on his Cass county farm. His remarkable yield virtually assures him of winning one of the master corn growers' trophies awarded to producers of the five biggest county-contest yields, and promises to boost him to state and national corn growing honors as well.
