Local Families Now Located in Fine New Homes

Andy Robinson and Leslie Hutchinson Families Occupy Companion Houses on Rock Street

Recently completed and now occupied by their owners are two adjoining homes that occupy large 52x140 foot lots on Rock street (4th Avenue) just east of Eleventh street.

Big or little, new or old, houses are usually judged by their eye appeal. The hang of the roof, the look of the windows, the inviting doorway, the painted walls inside, all go to make homes attractive, and these two of Leslie J. Hutchinson and W. A. Robinson have that appeal from the roof tops to the far edge of the Robinson lot, where a retaining wall is to be built soon.

The owners of these homes need never fear second-story men, because there isn't any second story. Neat but not giddy, these white houses with their shuttered front windows, inviting doorways, cheerful double windows in the living room at Hutchinson's, cement sidewalks and steps and the fast growing grass on the spacious lawns, all go to make them most inviting.

The Hutchinson home is located on the corner lot, while the Robinson home is located on the adjoining lot to the east.

Workmanship on the two homes was identical. Herman Tiekotter was the general contractor; H. H. Feeler, Tekamah, father of Mrs. Robinson, installed the heating system and plumbing; Charles Fulton did the interior and exterior painting and Robert Cappell did the electrical work.

The new home owners are both well known here, having lived in Plattsmouth for a number of years. Mr. Hutchinson is the distributor of Sinclair products in this territory, delivering to Sinclair stations and a large bulk farm trade. Mr. Robinson is the job printer in the Journal office and they have lived here seven years. Both couples have one son.

It was the fore part of April when construction was started on the two homes, which were ready for occupancy last week. The Robinson family was the first to take possession, on Sunday, June 29. Two days later they were followed by the Hutchinsons, who, with their son, Donald, moved in Tuesday, July 1.

The interior charm first becomes apparent to callers in the dawn-grey and dusky rose painted vestibule just off the living room at the Robinson home and the blue orchid walls and ivory ceiling of the Hutchinson's vestibule. These vestibules afford privacy for the living room when tradesmen come to the door and also form a windbreak so that icy drafts don't sweep in as they do in winter when an outside door opens directly into the living room. This also applies to the rear entrance halls, similarly located just off the kitchen and through which one may pass to the basement without entering the main part of the house.

And speaking of basements, both are full house size, contain laundry rooms and shower baths, as well as the heating and air conditioning units and hot water heaters. There is left an abundance of room and both couples plan to transform this into neatly-arranged recreation rooms.

There is no necessity for guests to knock or ring old fashioned doorbells, as there has been installed in each home a pair of melodious chimes, such as so many of the newly built homes possess, with different signals for the front and rear doors.

Both homes are insulated with insulated wallboard beneath the siding and an efficient insulating material over the ceilings in the attics.

The Andy Robinson Home
Five rooms and bath, resting on a foundation of cement blocks that encloses a full size basement, and surmounted with a composition shingle roof of Camp Fire red—in a few brief words that paints the picture of the Andy Robinson home as viewed from the outside. But back of the walls are the many niceties that make a home attractive.

Entering from the front vestibule, one observes that although separated by an archway, the living room and dinette seem quite open. The walls in both rooms have been painted a warm grey and the ceilings are of dusty rose. Two windows on the west and one on the south supply the proper amount of light and plenty of ventilation in the spacious living room, which is 14x19 feet in size. An added attraction in the living room is the recessed what-not rack along the west wall.

Grey-blue walls with off-white ceiling make up the color scheme for the main bedroom, which is situated at the southeast corner and to the north of this is Larry's room, slightly smaller in size. Its walls are yellow colored with off-white ceiling. Both bedrooms have large, wide closets. There is also a cloak closet in the vestibule or "service" room and a linen closet in the small hallway.

The bathroom, 5x7 in size, has blue as its predominant color. The ceiling and upper half of the wall is finished in pale blue. The lower part is of peach linoleum. Marble blue in-laid linoleum covers the greater part of the floor, with a Japanese orange stripe between it and the coronation blue cove that extends a few inches up the sidewalls. At either side of the medicine cabinet is an 18-inch long lamp.

Kitchen walls have been painted gleaming ivory. It is not a large kitchen (approximately 10x10) but is arranged in most efficient manner. Built-in cupboards of knotty pine have been finished in sienna red. The double kitchen sink and work table runs along the north wall with adequate built-in storage space. A gas range, refrigerator and kitchen set, consisting of table and four chairs, are all contained in the kitchen without any apparent crowding. As previously stated a vestibule off the kitchen, leads to the basement or the outside of the house at the northwest corner.

Crystal fixtures are used throughout the house. Attached to the north wall in the kitchen is the chrome holder with white opal glass crystal and louvered bottom. The chromium ceiling holder has white glass with crystal lines and bottom louveres.

The colonial brass with crystal lanterns in the dinette—a Brewster series—is a lovely period design that imparts a finishing touch of delicate charm and graceful beauty to the colonial surroundings in which they are installed.

Venetian blinds are to hang in all of the windows. The shutters are rich maroon in color.

The Mayflower forced air furnace and summer air conditioning arrangement, with thermostatic control and an automatic hot water heater will both use natural gas for fuel.

Woodwork in the Robinson home is golden oak with a dull varnish finish. The floors are filled and gym finished.

Leslie Hutchinson Home
The Leslie Hutchinson home is 38x24 feet in size, and like that of the Robinson's has shutters, only green in color. The roof is of green composition shingles.

Following the modern trend, all windows in this home have venetian blinds. Indirect lighting is used. The color scheme of the various rooms is also carried into the woodwork tinted to complement the main color in each.

The walls in the living room are rose-tan in color with a dark ivory ceiling. In the main bedroom the walls look most inviting in robin's egg blue with a light ivory ceiling.

Double windows furnish adequate light in this room. Priscilla curtains add a charming touch to the bedroom. In the son's room the peach-tinted walls are set off by an ivory ceiling. Green and white checkered spread and curtains are used to lend charm to this room. Both bedrooms have large, wide closets. A closet has also been built into the front vestibule and there is a spacious linen closet in the hallway which separates the two bedrooms.

Bathroom walls have been painted a coral pink with a pale blue ceiling. The linoleum is a powder blue with a coral liner in marbled effect.

Although the interior and exterior appearance of the two homes is similar, the Hutchinson home has a kitchen-dinette instead of the arch-connected living room and dinette at the Robinson home.

The walls in this kitchen dinette are of yellowed ivory and the woodwork is finished in light maple. The popular knotty-pine cupboards, with a nice work table and a small sink, above which a window provides an abundance of light, are features. Other items of interest in this room include the maple dinette, refrigerator and gas range. Hanging in the windows are floral-designed curtains. The floor is covered with a light figured linoleum with a black cove base. It likewise is of marbled design.

Green linoleum has been used for the top of the work table. Cupboards and cabinets have wide doors that save the housewife from opening half a dozen peepholes to find what she wants.

A recessed compartment for the telephone is especially convenient in the kitchen.

Oak floors, nicely finished, are found in the living room, hallway and bedrooms, while, as stated, linoleum covering is used in the bathroom and kitchen dinette.

Much of the woodwork has been finished in umber stain with dull varnish. The archways are of acorn design.

In the basement a Timken silent-automatic oil heater with winter and summer air conditioning has been installed, also an automatic hot water heater, convenient laundry facilities and a needle spray shower.

Pictures of the two new homes appeared in Sunday's World-Herald.
