FORESEES LITTLE DIFFICULTY

In a press bulletin, Holger Holm, Nebraska FHA director, says construction of new homes throughout the state and the remodeling of existing ones will be little affected by priority rulings, since in many of the communities outside the defense zone there is no shortage of building materials, while in defense areas the FHA has worked out a program with OPM to provide priority ratings so the builders of homes in these areas (of which Bellevue is a part) may encounter as little difficulty as possible in obtaining home building materials that are scarce.

Mr. Holm says: "If at some time in the future building material stocks are exhausted, it is possible that home building in certain communities would be curtailed," but that time is not here and for all practical purposes home building in Nebraska may proceed without any interference for the present.

"So long as applications for mortgage insurance involve well built, well designed, livable homes in good neighborhoods to be purchased or built by families of steady income and good credit, FHA will continue to accept, and will welcome, such applications."

Shallcross, licensed realtor, has an ad in this issue announcing availability of first of the new FHA approved and inspected Bellevue homes built by Cozy Homes, Inc., on small down payment and easy terms. Corn Huskers will Compete Before $150,000

National Contest Opens November 3 on Theodore Schaefer Farm Near Tonica, Ill.

TONICA, Ill. (UP)—More than 150,000 persons will tramp over the Theodore Schaefer farm near here Nov. 3, expecting to see a new record set in the national corn husking contest—top sporting event of the year for farmers from 11 midwestern states.

Competition is expected to be the keenest in corn husking history as state winners and runners-up battle to smash an all-time record established in 1940 at Davenport, Ia., when Irvin Bauman of Eureka, Ill., husked 46.71 bushels of corn in 80 minutes.

The national event will follow by three days the Illinois state contest which also will be held on the Schaefer farm.

Contest officials have added parades, farm equipment exhibitions and band concerts to the program in hope of making the two contests a four-day carnival.

States which will be represented in the national event include Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Missouri, Indiana, Ohio, Pennsylvania, and South Dakota.

Each state will send its two top huskers. Defending champions are not entered automatically but must win their way through state contests each year to enter the national.

Central figure in pre-contest planning is the man on whose LaSalle county farm the contest will be staged.

Schaefer says he is not worried about the grass his guests will trample, the thousands of hot dogs they will eat or where they will park their automobiles. Those problems have been handed over to responsible committees.

Nevertheless, the prospect of a visit by 150,000 persons intrigues Schaefer and his two sons.

Important as the actual contest plans are the food and housing problems with which Tonica citizens and householders are now wrestling.

Officials say that 800 persons will be needed to serve food during the four-day event. Community larders are already being stocked with sufficient provisions. "Sufficient provisions" for the event, judging from last year's contest, means 1,075 pounds of coffee, 3,478 dozen buns, 3,606 pounds of hot dogs and 3,413 pounds of hamburger.

Many of the visitors will remain for the entire celebration. The influx of guests is expected to tax LaSalle county housing facilities and many of the visitors may be lodged in private homes.

Illinois state husking competition will be held on Oct. 31, from 12:30 until 1:45 p. m. A motor caravan will tour LaSalle county the following day.

Outdoor religious devotions will be conducted Sunday afternoon on the Schaefer farm by Dr. John W. Holland of Chicago, famed pastor of "The Little Brown Church of the Air."

The national event on Nov. 3 will begin at noon.

ARMY AND NAVY DESIGN FABRIC EQUAL TO SILKS

WASHINGTON (UP)—Army and navy officials have announced that they are not concerned about the impending shortage of silk used in powder bags and parachutes because they have developed satisfactory substitutes.

Navy informants say they have sufficient stocks of raw silk to fill their needs for the next two years, anyway, and that several years' experiments with synthetic fibers have produced satisfactory results.

The army discloses that its ordnance officers have developed a cotton cloth suitable for powder bags, and tests with Nylon and similar materials have shown that these substitute fibers are adequate for parachutes.

Everyone knows why parachutes are made of silk. Their cloth must be of light weight and strong resistance. Powder bags, it is explained, must leave a minimum of residue when the charge is fired to prevent smoldering fragments from igniting the next charge inserted in the gun's breech and causing it to explode prematurely.

Both the army and navy, with a long-range eye toward the future, have conducted experiments toward discovering these suitable substitutes and they say now that their efforts have borne fruit and they are highly satisfied with their results.

Production of the new materials is still in small quantities, but informants disclose that when it will become necessary they expect to have adequate facilities established to produce enough to fill all requirements.

LOCAL OFFICERS PRAISE BEER PROGRAM

Beer Retailers Show Continued Improvement. State Director Sandall Told

LINCOLN, (Special)—Local law enforcement authorities report continued improvement in the operation of retail beer places in Nebraska, Charles E. Sandall, state director of the Nebraska Brewers and Beer Distributors Committee, said today after making a 900-mile trip across the state.

"County and city officials told me they receive few or no complaints regarding beer outlets," the director said. "Many less complaints are received at my office now than three years ago when we commenced our program of cooperation with the public authorities which is as it should be. However, there will be no letup in our work of helping to eliminate such practices."

During his trip, Mr. Sandall held meetings with nearly 200 beer retailers and distributors at O'Neill, Valentine, Scottsbluff, Sidney and North Platte. Dealers came also from surrounding towns—one operator traveled 90 miles in the sandhills—to hear first hand the progress of the beer industry's self-regulation program. Law enforcement officials spoke at each meeting.

Typical of the statements made by local authorities was that of County Attorney R. P. Kepner, longtime Cheyenne county official, who addressed the Sidney meeting. "Mr. Sandall and the Committee are to be commended for the good work they are doing," he said. "I want to emphasize the importance of strict law observance on the part of every licensee. It is your strongest ally."

Director Sandall cited as evidence of improved retail operation the fact that the State Liquor Commission had to revoke only two licenses and suspended 79 among the 2,250 on-sale dealers in 1940.

A sound film, prepared by the United Brewers Industrial Foundation which sponsors the program in Nebraska and 13 other states, was shown to the dealers. It depicted the benefits of the self-regulation plan.

In addition to his meetings with members of the industry, Mr. Sandall addressed the Scottsbluff Rotary Club and was interviewed over Station KGKY, Scottsbluff, regarding the Committee's operation.

The state director, accompanied by Joseph W. Miller, public relations director, go to New York City on October 15 and 16 for a roundtable conference sponsored by the Foundation. They will exchange views with officials of other states in the program.

Defense Gardens Can Be Started Everywhere Now

Whether your defense garden is made in the south or north, there are some vegetables which can be planted this fall. How long the list is determined by your location.

In the cold weather states, where the ground freezes deeply, there are both perennial and annual vegetables which can be sown this fall to advantage.

The perennial vegetables, including asparagus and rhubarb, may be planted now. A crop too seldom grown by amateurs is winter perennial onions grown from sets which if planted now will give green onions for the table before the ground can be spaded for spring planting.

Two of the early spring vegetables can be conveniently planted in the fall. These are leaf lettuce and spinach, waiting until the last minute when the ground can be worked and then covering the rows with a mulch until frost is out of the ground in the spring. While leaf lettuce usually is held over until spring and comes quickly enough sown then, old-time gardeners used to sow it in the fall and reap early lettuce from these early seedings.

The ground must be prepared carefully for fall sowing. It is a good thing to spade or plow the whole garden, turning under any compost or manure which is obtainable, to replenish the supply of humus in the soil. This fall preparation will make spring planting easier and earlier, and will also improve the mechanical condition of the soil next spring. Rains will penetrate deeper, and frost action will help mellow the soil.

Spinach should be sown late, but before the ground freezes. It is not intended that the seed shall germinate this fall, but that it shall lie in the ground through the winter and sprout in the first favorable weather of spring.

HEDGE OF RHUBARB AND ASPARAGUS AS A SCREEN FOR THE VEGETABLE GARDEN.

Spinach is a cool weather crop, usually the first to be sown by market growers in the spring. It must be grown and harvested before hot weather arrives, and fall planting often gives it a start of several weeks.

Select the modern heavy-leaved types to sow.

The main requisite for an asparagus bed is deep rich soil and ample root room for each hill, giving the plants 3 feet of space each way. Rhubarb roots should be set out now. A dozen plants will be sufficient to provide an ample supply for the average family, and they will last a lifetime with little care. New varieties of rhubarb which are characterized by pronounced red coloring in the stalk, are now popular. They show improvement in tenderness and flavor over the older types.

When seed is sown, or plants set out in the fall in ground which has been newly spaded, a mulch put over the soil after it has frozen to keep the frost in, is usually advisable. It helps prevent winter thaws which might heave the plants out of the ground, or uncover the seed.
