Meat Shortage May Be Relieved By Marketing

Relief Seen for the Live Stock Feeders in the Increasing of the Feed for Stock

Washington, July 15 (UP)—The meat shortage soon may be relieved by a sharp upturn in livestock marketing, War Food Administration officials said today.

They based the prediction on the acute shortage of corn and other grains on the market, dry southwestern ranges that may force early shipment of cattle from that area, and the abnormally large number of hogs and cattle on farms.

So strong is the conviction of some officials that a rush of livestock to markets will develop within a few weeks that they are again studying allotment plans to prevent a swamping of slaughter facilities.

The plan, under which marketing permits would be issued to livestock producers to prevent a market glut, were developed last winter by secretary of agriculture Claude R. Wickard to handle the record numbers of hogs and cattle expected to reach markets last spring.

Food officials emphasized that a more severe meat shortage than at present may follow large-scale marketing that would reduce livestock numbers on farms. Storage facilities are insufficient to hold large quantities of meat.

The weather bureau said that while livestock generally continue in good condition there is "developing a rather widespread need for rain to maintain growth of pastures and ranges over much of the central and western portions of the country."

In the southwestern grazing area, the bureau said, the range is spotted, with moisture badly needed in some sections. Texas ranges were said to be holding up well, with the stock good but marketing slow.

The War meat board reported in Chicago that the movement of beef to market recently has increased and that for the first time in months the armed service requirements are being met. Packers are required to set aside 45 per cent of certain grades of steers and heifer beef for the armed services.

There is no indication yet that civilian meat ration allowances will be increased this year. In recent weeks, most civilians have been unable to obtain as much meat, particularly beef, as they are entitled to under present ration allowances.

Farmers have indicated they intend to grow 127,000,000 hogs this year—21 per cent more than the 1942 record. But the war food administration has warned that the feed supply is not sufficient to fatten that number. A program to adjust corn and hog prices, making it less profitable for farmers to hold the corn for feeding to hogs, is before war food administrator Marvin Jones.

According to latest reports the plan calls for an increase in the corn ceiling from the present $1.97 a bushel, Chicago basis, to about $1.20 a bushel. It also includes hog and cattle marketing differentials in prices to make it less profitable for growers to feed to heavy-weights.

Hollywood Sees Premier Of 'For Whom Bell Tolls'

Notables Gather to Witness the Dramatic Story of the Spanish Civil War

New York, July 16, (UP)—The movie version of "For Whom the Bell Tolls," the novel with the Spanish revolution setting, was received today as one of the pictures of the year, except that it was too long.

For two hours and 50 minutes, a crowd of 2,000 notables watched the $3,000,000 technicolor film unfold the world premier of a story that covered only four days of war in the high Sierras of Spain.

Hollywood tossed aside its traditions and followed closely Ernest Hemingway's novel, including controversial Spanish politics and the sleeping bag episode, leaving out only the unmentionable phrases and the more intimate scenes.

Gary Cooper aptly plays the leading role of Robert Jordan, an American soldier of fortune who dies in the long-awaited end of the picture, defending the retreat of "Hos Woman," Marie (Ingrid Bergman).

The premier, of which all proceeds went to the national war fund, brought a host of screen and public notables including army and navy officials, Dorothy Lamour, Mary Martin, Sen. Claude Pepper, Wendell Willkie and Banker Winthrop Aldrich.

Although the Paramount producers termed the picture essentially a "love picture," politics were expressed plainly in Robt Jordan's explanation of the Spanish Civil war. Talking to his republican followers he said: "Germany and Italy are on one side, Russia on the other and the Spanish people caught somewhere in between."

The fascists and the communists, he said, were using Spain as a proving ground. Gen. Francisco Franco, fascist head of the Spanish government, was not mentioned in the film.

Historic Ball Game

Old timers may possibly recall a ball game played between Rock Bluffs and Plattsmouth back on a summer afternoon in May of 1887. Judge C. L. Graves, father of Harry Graves of The Journal composing room, pitched for the Bluffs.

The Plattsmouth battery of Tom and Jim Patterson was well known in the early days. Another brother, Sam, handled the shortstop assignment. Tom "Bert" Pollock, with the telephone exchange for years and who was largely responsible for getting bridges over the Platte at Louisville and Plattsmouth, played the game. The box summary:
