all departments. His theme next Sunday morning is "A Faith Deferred."

Promotes New Idea

We wonder how many of our people realize the significance of the speech correction clinics and lectures which are being held at the Weeping Water school building each Saturday morning for fifteen weeks. Orsen Perkins of Omaha, state chairman of the Nebraska Society for Crippled Children, states their purpose this way, "We want to bring speech correction to children with speech handicap." The work here is being sponsored by the Cass county committee of the Nebraska Society for Crippled Children and money is raised by the sale of seals at Easter time. As the teachers are asked to co-operate in this work, it was the idea of Mrs. Lora Lloyd Kieck, Cass county school superintendent, that the teachers should have the benefit of these off-campus classes and receive credit for their work done there. Although the speech clinics are held in other counties Mrs. Kieck's idea of giving the teachers credit for their work, while getting the instruction is original, and she deserves great credit for her work along this line.

The speech clinic opens each Saturday morning at nine o'clock and lasts until noon. Dr. L. T. Lasse of the state University will be speaker at the meeting this Saturday. Mrs. Evelyn Franke of Cedar Creek, is Cass county chairman of the Nebraska Society for Crippled Children, and has charge of all arrangements.

It does not often occur that two golden wedding anniversaries are celebrated the same day in our community, but last Sunday was the exception. Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Wiseman held "open house" for Mr. Wiseman's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Wiseman, who were married October 15 1893. Mrs. Wiseman, nee Delia Johnson, is truly a pioneer of Cass county as she was born on the farm now owned by Mrs. Anna Mohr, south of Weeping Water. Mr. Wiseman was born at Corydon, Indiana, and came to Cass county when a young man. Since their marriage they made their home for a few years on a farm southeast of town, and later moved to Mt. Hope district, where they remained until they moved into Weeping Water. Mr. and Mrs. Wiseman have two children, Lawrence Wiseman of Weeping Water, and Mrs. Gean Stark of Omaha; five grandchildren and one great grandchild.

Mr. and Mrs. Wiseman have taken an active interest in all civic and church work. Mrs. Wiseman is the teacher of the woman's bible class at the Methodist Sunday School, and is active in their woman's society for social service and the welfare society. She is also a member of the Weeping Water Woman's club. Mr. Wiseman is keenly interested in Red Cross work and other benevolent organizations and has always given freely to all such causes.

Friends called both afternoon and evening. The house was decorated with yellow roses and refreshments were served from the dining table which had as its centerpiece a beautiful wedding cake with tall yellow tapers on each side.

During the 1943 legislative session, the Unicameral passed LB-295, an act which enables counties and groups of counties to establish local health departments for the health protection of their citizens to levy the necessary taxes and to set up the organization of such a health department. The enabling act is regarded as a milestone in the development of public health services for Nebraska.

Home Demonstration clubs will study the details of the enabling act which means that rural people may begin to have some of the health services now available only in large urban centers. The demonstration is in the form of questions and answers and explains the bill. A circular, prepared by Miss Elin Anderson, will provide all of the basic information about the legislation and how it can be applied locally.

The schedule of leader training meetings follows: Eagle—Oct. 21, Murdock—October 22; Weeping Water—October 26th; Elmwood, October 27th; Nehawka—October 28th; Plattsmouth—November 2nd.

1943 County Champions Named

At a meeting of the county 4-H award committee the following individuals were named as county champions in the various projects: Canning Champion—Ruth Pollard, Nehawka; Clothing Champion—Orlah Kuntz, Nehawka; Cooking Champion—Dorothy Sand, Nehawka; Girls Record Champion—Charlotte Ann Rieke, Weeping Water; Meat Project Champion—Jim Wolph, Avoca; Peter Halmes—Rural Electrification Champion; Swine Champion—Ralph Hild, Plattsmouth.

The above individuals have been entered as county contestants for state awards. Jim Wolph, Avoca and Ann Rieke Weeping Water, were also named as having made the most outstanding record of special contributions to the 4-H Victory program.

Imogene Pollard and Eda Tyson of Nehawka, and Robert Cole of Plattsmouth submitted reports to be entered in the contest for Moses Leadership and President's achievement trophies.

Insects on Wheat

A green plant house has been found in rather large numbers on blades of wheat plants in many Cass county farms. Fortunately the insect known as the apple grain aphid usually is not a serious pest according to O. S. Bare of the Entomology department of the Agricultural college. A good rain would help the wheat a lot, however, and check the louse.

Plan Garden Flowing

A statewide fall Victory garden plowing campaign looking ahead to 1944, is now being planned and Cass county gardeners in town and county alike will be urged to participate. The state executive committee of the Victory Home and Garden Program recommended the fall plowing campaign in a meeting last week in Lincoln. At the same time, the group agreed that continue emphasis on home food production through gardens will be encouraged in 1944.

Preparedness Program

Prof. M. L. Baker of the College of Agriculture suggests a two-point "preparedness program" for livestockmen for the post-war period.

Reduction of or the entire liquidation of indebtedness while prices are good is regarded as the first step in such a program. The second step is to make every effort to keep the livestock a producing herd.

"Keep the old cows past their prime moving to market where they will add to the tonnage of beef badly needed now," says Baker. "Replace them with younger females of more desirable type and better quality. Then, if and when, lower prices come, the herd will be approaching its peak of productivity instead of having passed it; it will be young enough that it can be kept during the probable period of low prices instead of having to be sold at the low point."

Baker also pointed out that the younger animals will require less feed. He says this will allow for some culling next year which would keep up the farm income and help maintain production.

The present situation also gives the farmer interest in beef cattle production an unequalled opportunity to replace cattle with age and of mediocre quality and type with young cattle of excellent quality and beef type with a minimum of expenditure. It is true that good cattle are high in price but mediocre cattle are relatively higher than at almost any other time in our history" Baker says.
