Closing Days Of The USO Drive Sees Much Needed

Voluntary Contributions Will Aid in Providing Many Comforts and Facilities For Service Men

The first week of the United War Fund Drive is about over and we still need plenty of contributions to meet our quota in Plattsmouth, of $3,175.00. We surely don't want to let down the boys "over there" who are fighting so nobly for us "back here." In addition to the USO there are various United Nations Relief funds included in this big drive.

Most of you with members of the family in service have undoubtedly received letters back from the boys telling you something about what the USO is doing for them. Your contributions will help them in this manner:

$1.00—Will enable USO to provide full club facilities to six men for one day.

$5.00—Will buy 16 phonograph records of current song hits for music-hungry service men and women visiting USO clubs to hear their favorite selections.

$10.00—Will enable a USO Mobile Unit to entertain 1,000 men at five isolated outposts, with movies, song records and refreshments.

$15.00—Will provide bed and bath for six men every night in a home-like atmosphere at USO clubs when on leave from camps and outpost duty in continental United States and western hemisphere bases.

$125.00—Will cover the cost of showing full length feature movies to 2,000 service men and women at USO clubs.

Don't hesitate to give, and give freely. If you have not been solicited and are desirous of giving please contact your local ward captain, as follows: First Ward—Miss Minnie Guthmann; Second Ward—Mr. John V. Svoboda or Mr. Lawrence Caldwell; Third Ward—Mr. John J. Clodt; Fourth Ward—Mr. George L. Farley, and Fifth Ward—Mr. Ernest Elliott. COOL COMFORT in a New, Heatless Machineless, PERMANENT WAVE

After a creamy shampoo, the hair is spaced and then wound in more curls than usual on feather-light rods.

A penetrating lotion is applied with a glass dispenser to mold the hair around the rods into curls. A second lotion sets the curl and restores the hair to its natural softness.

The hair is unwound thoroughly rinsed, dried and then a special creme hair dress is applied revealing an abundance of soft, strong curls. The hair is then ready for styling.

When the annals of modern beauty history are recorded by Father Time, the old gentleman should give a gold star to the scientists who made it possible for women to get permanent waves without heat and without machines.

They're quite new yet, these "cold" waves. In the newest one of all, which has just been announced, we are told that it is not even necessary to stretch the hair tight, which is still another comfort bonus.

We're comfort-minded today because we just read about this new permanent in a little booklet which begins with a history of the really painful discomfort women have suffered, up through the ages, in their pursuit of curly hair.

The booklet—called "Out of A Muddle—A Miracle" is illustrated with amusing pictures of ladies typical of their times. For instance, there for Nancy Neanderthal, the coquette of Caveman Gulch, who lived in Hollowhill, Nancy lured the bone-crunching boys by giving herself coy curls. How did she do it? Elemental, my dear Watson—but literally. She wound her hair around stout twigs, and secured them with thongs of dinosaur hide.

Quite a few generations later, along came Cleopatra, who was a marked woman if you remember. Cleopatra had her hair wound around perfumed, polished sticks, then covered it with mud, and sat in the most select sunshine to let it dry.

After Cleopatra, there was Marie Antoinette, much given to the ungente art of beheading her enemies. Perhaps her object was to get their hair where she wanted it, namely, in the hands of her royal wigmakers. These blameless gentlemen made Marie beautiful by winding her hair around sticks and boiling it for several hours, then fashioning the boiled ringlets into huge clusters of curls for the minx-ish mistress of the French courts.

From Marie Antoinette, we skip to the Victorian Age, and Penelope Prim. She it was who lived when the first permanent waves were invented. After a borax solution came ten broiling minutes in a tube heated to 800 degrees Fahrenheit. Its no wonder the Penelope Prim's lived sheltered lives. The wonder is they lived at all!

Fanny Flapper, the typical girl of the whiz-frizz age may stir your memories back to your own early permanents. Remember the kinks and the fuzz and the wiry-feeling of your hair after your first permanent? It was wonderful then.

What's wonderful now is that late permanent waving methods are not only infinitely more comfortable than ever before but they are also very much easier on your hair. The latest cold method is done with safe tested, mild chemical lotions that can be used on any type of hair, which should be welcome news to women with hair that formerly wouldn't "take" a permanent.

And what's more, if we understand correctly, blondes, brunettes, redheads, gray ladies, be their hair fine, medium, or coarse, will all emerge from this new method with softer, stronger curls and a better hair condition—a welcome natural softness.

The process is simple. The hair is wound on special lightweight rods. Then by means of an eye-dropper style glass dispenser, the first lotion, which stays on 15 minutes, is applied. After this is removed, a second lotion is applied. This one stays on 20 minutes, sets the curl and restores the hair to its natural softness. Special attention is paid to getting good strong curls at the neckline, an important factor these days of short haircuts. Finally the hair is unwound, thoroughly rinsed, given a touch of scientific-purpose hair cream, and styled. The whole business takes no longer than an ordinary heat wave process. The softer, stronger curls last for months, not weeks. Blissful comfort while you're getting it. Better hair condition afterwards. A far cry from Nancy Neanderthal, and her pained girl friends.

The name of this new heatless permanent waving method is Cold Ray. We predict women will like it very much.

Miss Agnes Bloemke, company technician, was with the local representative, giving instructions, on Tuesday of last week.
