Appendicitis

intestine or colon. It is the right lower corner of the abdomen and is about the size and shape of a good big fish worm.

Inflammation of this organ has been recognized as a definite disease for a little over one hundred years, but for a long time it could not be treated properly because safe surgery of the adbomen had not been developed. The safe removal of the diseased appendix by the surgeon rests on the knowledge given us by Pasteur and Lister but was first accomplished by American surgeons.

Today we know how to make the diagnosis of appendicitis and can successfully and safely remove this organ when necessary yet many people still die of this disease or of its complications. An attack of acute appendicitis usually is ushered in by coliky pain in the upper part of the abdomen or over the whole belly. There is often nausea and sometimes ter a while the pain settles down in the members of the Saturday Eventhe right lower corner where the ing Dinner Club, learning about the sick appendix lies.

Then the patient has peritonitis in addition to appendicitis and may die of this complication.

Another reason for failure to cure this very curable disease is that the sick person decides to wait a while to see how the trouble is going to get along. He may do this before seeing his physician or, sometimes after he has seen the doctor and has been advised to get the appendix out at once. While he is waiting, the appendix breaks because its wall is gangrenous or the infection spreads right out through the wall of the appendix and the peritonitis is set up. The peritonitis may spread to involve every organ in the abdomen.

The moral of this story is selfevident, but let me repeat, if you think you may have acute appendicitis, do not take a physic, see your doctor at once and do as he tells you.

Not much like Christmas

A white christmas . . . sleigh bells in the snow . . . the laughter of little children, and then-clear and nostalgic on the frosty air-the miracle of tiny voices singing "Peace on earth, good will to men." There's the Christmas we all dream of-but especially those of our sweethcarts, sons and brothers who are fighting in the muck and mud of a trench . . . Think how they must dream of it! And they do . . .

"It was like any other day-" so wrote a soldier (a boy you might know) of Christmastime last year. "We landed about noon and tried to sleep . . . In the evening we went into a funny little African town and saw an old movie . . . then turned in. Not much like Christmas."

He's in the tropics now, that boy; it won't seem much like Christmas there, either. But this year-this Christmas-the folks back home are buying him the one present that can help to bring him back-back to a white Christmas-War Bonds! Decide now to give your boy an extra War Bond or two! And so there'll always be a Christmas, make every gift "The Present With a Future"-War Bonds!
