Hospitals Of Nation Meeting Conditions

Bed Space and Man Power Shortages in Hospitals Being Met as Far as Possible

The nation's hospitals are meeting a bed-space and manpower shortage by enlarging ward facilities at the expense of private and semi-private accommodations and enlisting volunteer workers for non-specialized tasks, a survey revealed today. The growth of hospital insurance programs and the general wartime prosperity have caused persons who formerly would have had home treatment to seek hospitalization for less critical ailments. Maternity wards have been crowded by the increased birthrate and most hospitals report advance reservations are essential to insure adequate accommodations during the confinement period. Many maternity hospitals have shortened the confinement period from 10 to seven days to ease the crowding. In most war-crowded cities, hospitals are completely filled almost all the time. Patients seeking private or semi-private rooms are placed in wards or, if their condition permits, are urged to postpone treatment. Most of the nation's larger cities have instituted pooling plans to transfer patients seeking admittance to crowded hospitals to less crowded institutions. St. Louis has two committees and the social planning council to care for the orderly distribution of patients. Ward vacancies are few, but there is a definite shortage of other types of accommodations. Isolation, pneumonia and cardiac facilities are overtaxed in San Francisco, the city health officer reported, although no emergency cases have been turned away. County hospitals have arranged to care for cases refused by private hospitals at a daily rate. The personnel shortage was termed the most acute problem in Detroit hospitals, where several hundred beds are not in use because of a scarcity of nurses, maids and attendants. New hospitals are under construction in areas where the population has been swollen by war workers, but officials were pessimistic about the prospects of finding sufficient personnel to handle capacity case loads. Private hospital facilities in New York approximate the demand, according to the United Hospital fund which represents 76 private institutions, and municipal hospitals report the demand below normal. After the acute shortage of bed space last month because of the influenza epidemic, Kansas City hospitals reported that the number of patients has fallen off to a safe level. Patients are transferred to less crowded hospitals from those whose facilities are overtaxed, and patients requiring operations which can be postponed are advised to wait.

NEW ARMY HOSPITAL

Galesburg, Ill. Feb. 1. (UP)—The army's newest hospital, incorporating every known piece of medical equipment and a staff including specialists in almost every field, was opened here today. Called the Mayo General hospital, after the Mayo brothers of Rochester, Minn., the institution consists of several buildings, Col. H. L. Craft, commanding officer, said the hospital was "ready to receive patients" at any time. Specialists in surgery, urology, physiotherapy, x-ray and laboratory work are included on the staff. Clinics include those for eye, ear, nose and throat treatment, dentistry and x-ray treatment and diagnosis. Among the buildings making up the hospital are the main office buildings, kitchens and mess halls, post office, telegraph and telephone office, laundry, gymnasium, post exchange and lunchroom, recreational halls and medical and quartermaster warehouses. "This institution is one of the best of its kind in the country. We are all happy that now we can begin our real work here," Craft said in an address at the opening ceremonies.

More Margarine

Washington, Feb. 1. (UP)—Civilians will get more margarine but less butter during the first three months of this year, the War Food Administration said today in announcing allocations of edible fats and oils.

First quarter supplies of margarine for civilians will be 150,000,000 pounds compared with 125,000,000 during the last quarter of 1943, but the butter allocation will drop from 435,000,000 to 410,000,000 pounds.

The total of edible fats and oils available to civilians for 1944, according to WFA estimates, will average 43.9 pounds compared with 46.4 pounds last year.

The electric companies belong to MAIN STREET

War has helped destroy a lot of America's old illusions. The idea that all South Sea beauties look like Dorothy Lamour. The idea that all Englishmen wear monocles and all Russians whiskers. The idea that all electric companies are the exclusive property of a handful of wealthy people.

Utility securities are popular investments with the banks, insurance companies and fraternal orders which hold your savings in trust for you. Why? Because cheap, dependable electric service is so basic to your way of life. Because this service is provided by experienced business management.

Wherever you live in America —on Main Street, Park Avenue, or RD No. 1—your money has helped to build the electric industry and you have a large stake in it.
