Assessors Re-elect Puls As Secretary-Treasurer

Assessors Association Holds Meeting at Lincoln Hotel for Past Three Days

The County Assessor's Association of Nebraska concluded their sessions at the Hotel Lincoln in Lincoln on Friday with the election of their officers for the ensuing year.

Harry W. Scott, assessor of Lancaster county, was re-elected as the president of the association. J. H. Foster of Cheyenne county, was elected vice president to succeed Rupert M. Young, Fillmore. W. H. Puls of Cass county was re-elected as the secretary-treasurer of the association.

The assessors after committee recommendation, voted to circulate petitions in behalf of proposed legislation for correction of automobile and truck assessment procedure.

Ingnatius Klima, Jr., Valley county clerk, and secretary of the Nebraska Association of County Clerks, met with the assessors Thursday and Friday to discuss the petitions.

"Under present methods," Klima said, "a car can come into the county from another county or another state, obtain license plates for the present year and even procure a tax receipt. This car is then assessed on April 1, but the tax is not subject to collection until the following year when the owner returns for a new license. By that time this owner may have moved to another state where he can obtain his plates without producing a tax receipt from Nebraska."

This process, Klima states, is adding to the tax burden of Nebraskans since the unpaid taxes increase the deficit and must be made up from the levy.

Any change in the statutes, he pointed out, will necessitate a constitutional amendment by an initiative petition signed by 10 percent of electors of each of two-fifths of the counties in Nebraska, filed with the secretary of state. The measure would then be submitted to electors at the first general election held not less than four months after the petitions have been filed. It is the aim of the backers to have such a petition ready for the 1944 election.

Club Sponsors Dance

The members of the M. A. O. club last evening sponsored a very much enjoyed dancing party at the Eagles hall for members of the high school. The young people found the evening most pleasant in dancing to the excellent music that had been provided.

The admission to the dance was the purchase of a 25-cent war stamp and through this means, the ladies sold 150 of the stamps to add to the war saving fund cause.

The ladies also sold refreshments of cake and hot chocolate to the young people attending.

Annual Cass County Feeders' Day

Plans are complete for the annual Cass County Feeders' Day scheduled for Wednesday, February 23. The program announced today should attract several hundred people from all parts of Cass county. The meetings start at 10:00 A. M. at the agricultural auditorium, in Weeping Water, with sessions for both men and women.

H. J. Gramlich, former head of the University of Nebraska Animal Husbandry department and now general agricultural agent for the Chicago and Northwestern Railway Co., will deliver the main address at a joint session following the noon hour. His topic is "Gazing Around the Corner." Gramlich formerly of Cass county, is one of the outstanding speakers of the country and is well versed on all agricultural problems.

The county 4-H public speaking contest is also planned as a part of the general session during the early afternoon along with a discussion on solving farm and home labor problems by L. R. Snipes, former Cass county agricultural agent.

M. L. Baker of the University of Nebraska Animal Husbandry department will also be on deck and will give a first hand report of experimental work conducted during recent years. Bulletin 359, Wintering Steer Calves, prepared by Baker has just been published. He will suggest ways of lowering livestock production costs.

Women's Session

The women's session of the Cass County Feeder's Day program for February 23rd has been planned to answer many present day problems confronting homemakers from the consumers standpoint. Scarcity of materials and equipment, questionable qualities, new goods and how dependable is labeling are factors to be considering in wise buying.

"To curtain or Not to Curtain" for the duration is another problem perplexing many homemakers. Answers to the above problems together with some guides for post war planning are sure to provide a worthwhile day for all.

Farm Machinery

L. F. Larsen of the Agricultural Engineering department and Eugene Ludwick, Weeping Water blacksmith, will give farmers first hand information on converting horse drawn farm equipment to tractor use starting in the forenoon at 10:00. The shortage of farm machines and equipment has resulted in unusual interest in this type of work including the building of manure loaders, hay sweeps, post hole diggers and other labor saving devices.

Livestock Diseases

Another high light of the meeting will be a discussion of live stock and poultry diseases by Dr. J. R. Snyder, chief of the Bureau of Animal Husbandry at Lincoln. Dr. J. M. Hejl, Weeping Water veterinarian, will also appear on the program discussing the artificial insemination of milk cows.

4-H Mobilization Week

Cass County 4-H club members will join their fellow clubbers over the state and nation in special observance of 4-H Mobilization Week, March 4 to 12. County Agents announced today.

In addition to the local meetings special state and national radio broadcasts are being planned. Highlight of the program will be an address by the President to all 4-H club members.

The observance will give 4-H club members an opportunity to check their efforts to date in helping to win the war, and make plans for increasing their production in 1944, in accordance with their slogan "feed the fighter".

Members of the Cass County 4-H committee equipped to discuss 4-H possibilities and to assist in arranging for organizational meetings include: Salt Creek, Mrs. Henry Bricker; Greenwood, Mrs. Vernon Greer; Tipton, Mr. Floyd Althouse; Elmwood, Mrs. Howard Pool and Mr. Wm. Streich; Stove Creek, Mrs. G. R. Eveland and Mr. LeRoy Cook; Center, Mrs. Thorwald Hansen; Louisville, Miss Verla Gaebel and Mr. Ervin Albert; Weeping Water, Mrs. J. M. Ranney and Mr. Watson Jones; Mt. Pleasant, Mrs. John Rieke; Avoca, Mrs. Paul Wolph and Mr. Clarence Norris; Nehawka, Miss Evelyn Wolph and Mr. Hall Pollard; Plattsmouth, Mrs. Roy O. Cole; West Rock Bluff, Mrs. Sherman Cole and Mr. Richard Cole; East Rock Bluff, Miss Margaret Moore; Liberty, Mrs. Kathleen Mullis and Mr. Randall Faris; and Eight Mile Grove, Mrs. Lloyd Schneider and Mr. H. E. Iske.

Wintering Steer Calves

Cass county feeders who feed yearling steers to be marketed from late summer to mid-winter will be interested in trials on that kind of feeding at the North Platte Experiment station during the last few hours.

Results of the experiment station trials are contained in a new experiment Station Bulletin No. 350, written by Marvel L. Baker, professor of Animal Husbandry at the University of Nebraska, College of Agriculture. It is now available through the office of the county agent, or at the College of Agriculture in Lincoln.

Steers used in the feeding experiment were bought as weaning calves in the fall preceding the summer in which they were fed. They were then used in trials which afforded numerous comparisons between different roughages, different protein supplements, and different carbonaceous concentrates for wintering calves.

Results of the trials are discussed in the bulletin. This subject will also be discussed by Mr. Baker on the Cass County Feeders' Day Program at Weeping Water, February 23.

Spring Sewing

"The last several weeks before the push of spring work is an ideal time to get the spring sewing done." Miss Baldwin, county home demonstration agent said today as she outlined suggestions to homemakers who are interested in fixing up their wardrobes.

Satisfaction of having some fresh and becoming dresses to slip into after a busy day in the garden or with the chickens will compensate for a little extra effort now, she pointed out.

While the stock of materials to select from may not be as large as in previous years, some new ones are coming to the shelves, early selections, for those who need material will be worthwhile.

Homemakers should not overlook the possibilities of using worn dresses as sources of material, she pointed out. Fashion magazines show many styles which can be adapted to combinations of material. There are dresses with skirt and sleeves of one material while the body of the blouse is of another. Apron and plastron effects and many varieties of the jumper and other styles which lend themselves to using material from two worn dresses or the use of some old and some new material. Skirts of boms; dresses often supply a good quality of material for a little girl's apron, blouse or pinafore.

Colors in the new materials are soft and varied. There are gay prints with limited colors on a neutral background. There are plain weaves, cottons in light pastels. Other materials are prints in pinks, crepe, jersey and spun rayon in nubby weaves.

Omaha Alcohol Plant Opens February 21st.

Omaha, Neb., Feb. 17. —Government officials, including Bradley Dewey, national rubber administrator, will come here from Washington, February 21 to take part in the dedication and witness the beginning of operations of the world's largest single unit grain alcohol plant.

Dewey will make the principal address at the dedication ceremony. Accompanying him from Washington will be Senators Butler and Wherry of Nebraska, Gillette and Wilson of Iowa, and officials of the DPC and WPB. Governors Dwight Griswold of Nebraska and B. B. Hickenloper of Iowa, also will take part in the dedicatory program.

This plant marks another big contribution by Nebraska and the Midwest to the prosecution of the war. It will be an important factor in overcoming the shortage of rubber, vitally needed for war equipment.

Establishment of the grain alcohol plant at Omaha in the heart of the nation's grain and livestock producing area also is expected to be the first step in postwar development of many new industries in the Midwest to make use of raw materials produced on the farm. In addition to synthetic rubber and explosives, farm chemurgists have developed more than 700 uses for grain alcohol and its derivatives. These include plastics, medicines, dyes and aviation fuel.

Each bushel of grain processed in this plant will produce two and one-half gallons of alcohol. From this amount of alcohol, 20 pounds of butylene glycol is derived, to be converted to butadiene, principal raw material of synthetic rubber. This alcohol also is the source of other vinyl compounds used in the manufacture of synthetic rubber.

The plant will require an estimated 7,000,000 bushels of grain annually. It will process 20,000 bushels daily, using 45 per cent corn, a like proportion of wheat, and 10 per cent barley malt.

Although grain alcohol is the principal product of the plant, valuable by-products will be produced. These include corn oil, a highly concentrated livestock food, and dry ice.

Another by-product will be corn oil. This is produced by extracting the germ of the corn, treating it with live steam, and pressing it to squeeze out the oil. Each bushel of corn yields one and one-half pounds of a corn oil that is valuable for seasoning food for human consumption. The plant will produce approximately 5,000,000 pounds of corn oil annually.

The dry ice plant, still to be built, will have the capacity of 20 tons daily. It will make use of one-half of the energy from the starch used in making alcohol. The carbon dioxide recovered from the fermenting tanks is first filtered to remove impurities. Then the gas is compressed into a liquid form. This liquid is then crystallized in a chamber and finally compressed into dry ice cakes.
