Great Wheat Yield Predicted For U. S.

One of the Largest Crops for Years is Seen by the Experts—Will Aid the War Effort

Washington, June 10. (P)—The nation's farmers today appeared headed for a seventh straight year of record-breaking crop production and the largest wheat crop in history.

Crop prospects now are better than one the same date in any of the last 10 years except 1942, an agriculture department monthly survey reported.

The optimistic outlook was generally well received in view of prospective continued high war food demands, expanded relief feeding, and the nation's depleted grain reserves.

It is estimated that efficiencies in trucking, inaugurated since May 1942, have already reduced truck mileage in hauling livestock by 15 per cent.

State and Federal Laws Involved. This plan will not require any hauler to perform any service in conflict with Federal or State Motor Vehicle Regulatory Laws.

11. Statement of Approval by Committee. The undersigned, member of the Cass County Livestock Industry Transportation Committee, hereby approve the livestock transportation conservation plan set forth above.

The War In Review

Allied Headquarters, Naples, June 5. (UP)—The Fifth army streamed through Rome, first of the axis-occupied capitals of Europe to be liberated, today in close pursuit of Germany's fleeing southern forces under orders to destroy them.

American vanguards entered the Italian capital yesterday afternoon, bringing to a climax the 237-day-occupied capital of Europe to be liberated, today in close pursuit of Germany's fleeing southern forces under orders to destroy them.

Advance shock troops, supported by American Sherman tanks, speared straight through Rome in a race to overtake and annihilate the weary, beaten enemy before he can reach his next strong defense line hinged on Florence, 150 miles to the north.

Moscow, June 5. (UP)—Red army troops killed more than 2,000 enemy soldiers in bitter hand-to-hand battles as they pushed strong German tank and infantry attacks yesterday north and northwest of Iasi in eastern Romania, it was announced today.

The enemy losses in the new assaults brought their total casualties to over 6,700 dead, in the last six days of fighting, a period in which the Russians also knocked out 272 tanks and 280 planes.

The Germans made five determined assaults on the soviet positions but were all turned back, the communiqué said. An entire army battalion of approximately 1,000 men was wiped out in one of the hard-fought engagements.

Allied Headquarters, Naples, June 5. (UP)—Four powerful allied columns swept 15 to 40 miles beyond Rome in headlong pursuit of the beaten German 14th army today, and Nazi retreat was degenerating rapidly into a disorganized rout.

Harried every step of the way by the onrushing American and British columns, the nazis were reported putting the torch to everything in their wake, blowing up bridges and highway junctions in a desperate attempt to escape.

Low-flying allied warplanes machine-gunned the fleeing enemy, while a force of almost 500 American Flying Fortresses and Liberators swung out over the Riviera to blast their supply and reinforcement lines leading into France.

President Reported Tops Physically

Physician States Examinations Shows the President to Be in the Best of Shape

Washington, June 9. (UP)—President Roosevelt today is in better condition than most men of his age—62—according to his personal physician, Vice Admiral Ross T. McIntire.

McIntire's report, which followed a complete physical checkup on the president, removed health as a probable factor in Mr. Roosevelt's 1944 political plans, contradicting suggestions by his political opponents that he could not withstand the rigors of either a fourth presidential campaign or a fourth term.

McIntire's report was prompted by a request from White House reporters for the results of a physical examination of Mr. Roosevelt made May 23 at the naval medical center at Bethesda, Md.

"He is in better physical condition than the average man of his age," said McIntire, who is also against hard fighting into the base of the Norman peninsula have cut the east coast railroad and highway to Cherbourg, the two main Nazi lines to the great port, it was announced officially today.

(The United Nations radio at Algiers said the Cherbourg rail line was cut with the capture of St. Mere Eglise, 20 miles south of the port, by allied airborne troops.)

A spokesman for General Dwight D. Eisenhower's headquarters revealed that operations generally "continue satisfactorily, with the beachheads enlarging," on the fourth day of the allied invasion of northern France.

The Germans reported that a great naval armada of several hundred vessels sailed eastward past Cherbourg toward the assault areas early today evidently to pour powerful reinforcements into the beachheads.

Nazi reports also said an armored spearhead was approaching St. Lo, 20 miles southwest of Bayeux and half way across the peninsula, and the Germans might be forced to abandon Cherbourg in the face of the developing allied drive to isolate it.

surgeon general of the navy. Events leading to the examination began last winter shortly after he returned from the four-power conferences in Cairo and Tehran.

According to McIntire, the president never "performed better in his life," than in Cairo and Tehran, but when he returned to Washington in late December he was tired and became a target for influenza and bronchitis.

The president went to the naval hospital late in March for a check, and in early April McIntire said he needed rest, sunshine and exercise. So, on April 8 the chief executive went south to the coastal South Carolina plantation of Bernard M. Baruch and spent a month lolling in the sun, away from the daily grind of the White House.

He came back to Washington tanned and said he felt better than in months. But to make certain, McIntire put him through another examination.

"We gained everything we hoped for in our stay down in South Carolina," McIntire said. "It was a very excellent rest period in which we mixed in a very good routine."

He stressed that Mr. Roosevelt in the future must get periodic breaks in his White House routine to retain the gains made during his spring vacation "so that the day-after-day grind doesn't become a fatiguing proposition."

"His health now is excellent and I can say that unqualifiedly in all respects," McIntire said.

To maintain the physical gain, the president has been put on a daily routine more strict than he followed in his earlier years as chief executive. He is on what McIntire called "a well-balanced diet" and as a result, his weight is down to 180 pounds, compared with an average for several years of 185 or more.

McIntire said the president was pleased with his present weight and hoped to keep it there.

Mr. Roosevelt has started swimming again in the afternoons, whenever his schedule permits. He has stopped doing business at lunch and is spending weekends in a complete relaxation as his job will permit.

French People Greet Allies In Captured Bayeux

Release From Yoke of German Masters Brings Rejoicings—Urge on to Paris

Editor's Note—Here is the first eye-witness dispatch from the first town in France to be liberated. It was filed by Richard D. McMillan, veteran United Press war correspondent who is now with the invasion armies after covering the Mediterranean campaign from El Alamein to Italy.

Bayeux, Allied Front Line Normandy, June 10. (UP)—I toured the allied front in Normandy all day and entered this historic town of Bayeux with the first allied troops who occupied it at midday.

It was a scene of rejoicing as the populace went wild and dashed thru the narrow streets throwing flowers and crying, "God save the King. We've waited for this day. On to Paris!"

The streets were blocked with cheering men, women and children. The tri-color and union jacks hung from the windows. Cafes threw open their doors and pianists began to play British and French patriotic tunes, as the crowds danced, shouting "Vive Tommy. Vive Amerique."

It was a scene of mingled war and peace through which I passed as I drove a jeep into the interior along part of the front line and then back again to the allied coastal base. After a dusty, dreary morning the sun burst through and the skies cleared.

Havev was wrought by allied naval and air bombardment, which had wrecked some roads and many hamlets which the Germans had used as headquarters.

Some villages were entirely deserted; in others some civilians remained and rushed out with clutching hands, screaming for joy. One village woman, Madame Andre Nicholson told me:

"Oh! The Germans were really wicked. They took everything we had. Recently Rommel came to this village on a visit of German coast defenses. The nazis turned out in force. Rommel told them 'these positions are impregnable.'"

There can be NO "PART-TIME" SOLDIERS ON THE FIGHTING FRONT—OR HOME FRONT. THIS IS THE CRUCIAL HOUR. DOUBLE YOUR EXTRA WAR BOND INVESTMENT IN THE 5TH WAR LOAN. THIS is the year of decision. This is the year that General Eisenhower said might bring victory in Europe. But no victory can be won with "part-time" soldiers... either in the invasion or on the home front. We know our fighting men are ready for anything... anywhere... bar nothing. How about you? Are you ready to match their fighting spirit with your War Bond purchases? It's the American way to work together and fight together—freely. Once again America asks you to invest in extra War Bonds—more than you've ever subscribed for before. Remember—it's for invasion! For victory!

WHERE THE FUEL GOES

AN ARMY TRANSPORT burns 33,000 gallons of fuel oil a day.

Allied Supreme Headquarters, London, June 9. (UP)—American armored forces driving westward

Allied Headquarters, Naples, June 9. (UP)—Allied tanks and infantrymen pursued the fleeing German 14th army along a broad front extending more than 40 miles above Rome today, and a communique said that the nazis have begun a general retreat from their Adriatic coastal line south of the Pescara-Rome highway.

Striking over roads littered with wrecked tanks and trucks abandoned by the retreating enemy, 5th army spearheads raced almost unopposed along the three main highways leading north and northwest of the capital in an effort to bring the nazis to battle.

American units were reported far beyond Civitavecchia, 40 miles above Rome on the Tyrrhenian coastal road, and pounding ahead toward the next major city objective on that route, Orbetello, 38 miles to the north.
