✕ marks the spot where Mrs. Frazer fainted

It happened at the Colemans' party. The crowd got to talking about the high cost of living—which is one of Mrs. Frazer's favorite topics.

She told in detail how her husband had to increase the family clothing allowance—and how hard it was to balance the food budget—and wasn't it dreadful how much more everything cost!

So Bill Coleman quietly reminded her that at least one household necessity had not gone up. She almost exploded. "What's that?"

"Electric service," said Bill. "And government figures" show that instead of increasing, the average price of electricity has actually decreased since war began." The shock was a little too much for Mrs. Frazer. Luckily, Ed Lutz was there to catch her.

You may find Bill's statement as hard to believe as Mrs. Frazer did. But it's a fact. And it's not just a wartime phenomenon. Electric rates have been coming down for years—so far and so fast that, with increased usage, the average family pays only about half as much per kilowatt-hour as it did 15 years ago.

In other words, you're getting twice as much for your money.

THE OLD JUDGE SAYS...

"The war sure has made a lot of changes in this old world of ours, hasn't it, Judge?"

"Plenty of them, John. One that few people realize is that the rubber producing center of the world is now right here in the United States.

"When the Japs conquered the big natural rubber producing centers of the world they thought they had us licked. But in two short years, thanks to American industry, we are now producing synthetic rubber enough to supply all our military and essential civilian needs.

"Our rubber experts knew how to make it but the problem was to get the huge amounts of industrial alcohol needed. Almost overnight the country's beverage distillers stopped making whiskey and converted 100% to the production of this vital ingredient. A high government official said recently this was '... an almost unparalleled example of the overnight conversion of an entire industry from peace to war.'"

"Come to think of it, Judge, it was a mighty fortunate thing the beverage distilling industry was in existence, wasn't it?"
