ARMISTICE DAY

For the third time we are celebrating Armistice Day in the midst of a war which has so altered the occasion's spirit and significance that there is some reason to doubt that November 11 will have a permanent place among our national holidays.

For twenty years we observed November 11 as the anniversary of that historic occasion when the "war to end war" was itself brought to an end. But for the past five years such an observance would have been a mockery of the facts. Rather, it has become a rebuke to the world of statesmen who, confronted repeatedly by threats to the brave slogan of "war to end war," did not raise their hands to stay those threats.

But the altered circumstances have not lessened the honor paid to the men who died believing that slogan. Since the beginning of history men have honored soldiers who died in battle for a cause they thought just. But for the soldiers of 1917-18, the cause had a nobility and grandeur that surpassed all others.

Today some may look back to the slogans of "war to end war" and a world "safe for democracy" with the same cynicism that many statesmen must have felt about them at the time. But many, perhaps most, of the American doughboys believed them. If they had to die in battle it was in the belief that no son or grandson of theirs, or any man anywhere, would have to do it again. And the same belief sustained and solaced the families of these doughboys.

Now another generation of American soldiers is fighting and dying. Maybe the thoughts of this generation are less idealistic. But the peace for which these soldiers fight may well have a better hope of permanence for that very reason. They have fought over ground where another generation fought. And the silent rebuke of those who "shall not sleep, though poppies grow in Flanders fields" is not for them, but for the world which made it necessary for them to be there.

But the world at last seems to have realized how unworthy some guardians of the peace were of the sacrifice of even one Allied soldier's life. And when peace comes this time it seems certain that the American people, at least, will demand a greater voice in outlining the task of keeping that peace permanent, and will assume a more careful watch of those to whom the task is entrusted.

Thus, at last, we may keep faith with the men who died in the first World War and those who must die in the second to defeat the war makers and bring an end to war. When we can say that a sound, workable, whole-hearted organization for world peace is established and successful we can also say that we have honored these men as fully as we can.

That day, perhaps, will not be marked on a calendar. But until it comes the obligation to speed it should be this country's concern on November 11 and every other day of the year.

CIO Political Activities to Be Expanded

Success of the Political Action Committee Inspires Further Extension of Work

NEW YORK, Nov. 11. —(AP)— CIO Political Action committee spokesmen said today that a program for permanent establishment of the PAC and expansion of its activities to state and municipal elections will be presented to the CIO convention which opens Nov. 20 in Chicago.

Clark Foreman, secretary of the National Citizens PAC, said the future of this CIO-PAC offspring would be decided by an executive board meeting in the next 30 days and that meanwhile its offices would be consolidated with those of the parent CIO-PAC here. Sidney Hillman is chairman of both groups.

CIO-PAC said it had "only scratched the surface" of political action in working for the re-election of President Roosevelt. Sen. Robert F. Wagner, D. N. Y., and other candidates in Tuesday's balloting.

A spokesman envisioned the PAC's future role as "similar to that of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States or the National Association of Manufacturers—an educational force."

He said it would serve "a united labor front in and out of the CIO. It would be aligned with no party, he said, but would follow an independent course of supporting for office any candidates favorable to its program. He asserted that neither the democratic nor the republican party was powerful enough to win any election without the independent vote."

The PAC spokesman said that one of the reasons for expansion into state elections would be to prevent the passage of measures such as the constitutional amendments adopted in Florida and Arkansas prohibiting the closed shop. He saw political action necessary at the municipal level to assure local government cooperation with federal programs "and to prevent the loss of democracy at the point where it could most likely be lost first."

TO ENTER PRACTICE

LINCOLN, Neb., Nov. 11. —(AP)— Rush C. Clarke, assistant attorney general since 1939, has resigned the state post and will enter private practice, it was learned today.

The resignation is expected to become effective next week. Clarke, who recently conducted the state's case against Charles Hutter, Omaha, was admitted to the state bar in 1921, and was a practicing attorney at Scottsbluff from 1923 until he came to Lincoln in 1930. At the state capital he served as city attorney for six years and county attorney for eight.

He also was president of the Nebraska County Attorneys Association. Clarke is believed to have prosecuted more murder cases during his service as county attorney—an average of approximately three a year—than any other man in the state.

File Charges

NORTH PLATTE, Nov. 11. (AP)— Criminal action against Roy J. Witschy, Scottsbluff fuel oil dealer, was filed in federal district court yesterday, charging him with "willful and unlawful" violations of fuel oil ration regulations. He was charged on three counts.

The first count charged Witschy with making an untrue statement of fact in his application for additional fuel oil ration for Margaret Kneiss as her agent when he had no such authority.

The second count charged him with making application as agent for Ben Quick for 265 gallons of fuel oil for heating his house in Scottsbluff although he was not so authorized and Quick did not occupy a house heated with oil.

The third count charged Witschy with making false application for 564 gallons for fuel oil for James Klase who required no fuel oil.
