Russians Sweeping Near To Austria Pursuing Germans

Red Forces Swiftly Move Toward the Bavarian Alps to Check Plot for Last Stand

LONDON, March 26. (U.P.)—Russian armored columns drove to within 35 miles or less of Austria today in close pursuit of German forces reeling back across western Hungary in disorder.

Two soviet army groups totalling nearly 1,000,000 men were pushing toward Austria along a 90-mile offensive front south of the Danube river in a determined bid to thwart Nazi plans for a last stand in the Bavarian Alps beyond Vienna.

Red army vanguards already had outflanked the western Hungarian fortress city of Győr and were less than 78 miles from Vienna.

Moscow dispatches said the Germans were streaming back toward the Austrian frontier in disorder under the impact of the new offensive. In some sectors, the soviet high command said, the Germans abandoned their arms in their haste to retreat.

Far to the north, the Russian seizure of Danzig and Gdynia, twin German-held ports on the Baltic, appeared to be entering its last days.

Soviet forces captured suburbs within a mile and a half north west and two and a half south and southwest of Danzig and within a mile and a half southwest and two miles south of Gdynia yesterday. They also widened their wedge between the two ports to seven miles.

A front-line dispatch to the Moscow newspaper Pravda said the Germans had mobilized all men and boys between the ages of 16 and 18 to defend Danzig against the final Russian assault.

German prisoners said Nazi SS troops had been stationed behind front-line infantry units with instructions to shoot any soldiers who show signs of intending to retreat or surrender.

One of the last two German pockets in East Prussia was trimmed to 20 square miles an almost completely liquidated with the capture of Heiligenberg, 27 miles southwest of Königsberg. More than 9,000 prisoners were captured in the pocket in two days.

The other East Prussian pocket centers around Königsberg itself and totals 265 square miles.

On the Berlin front, Nazi broadcasts said Marshal Gregory K. Zhukov's First White Russian army was maintaining pressure on German defense positions on the west bank of the Oder between Kuestrin and Frankfurt, 38 and 33 miles east of the capital.

Fourteen Russian attacks along the Oder front were repulsed yesterday, Berlin said, and three "emergency"—probably pontoon—bridges across the Oder were smashed.

Berlin said the Russians were attacking with at least six armies in western Hungary in an attempt to break through to Vienna. An exchange telegraph dispatch from Moscow reported the soviet threat to Vienna was "growing hourly."

Marshal Fedor I. Tolbukhin's Third army group made the closest approach to the Austrian capital after capturing Tapolezaf and Papatzer, both 79 miles from Vienna and 36 miles from the Austrian border.

ROME, Mar. 26. (U.P.)—Fifth and Eighth army patrols probed enemy positions along the Italian front and engaged the Germans in several clashes, headquarters said today.

No changes in forward positions were reported. Planes of the Mediterranean allied air force continued the steady campaign against German communications with new attacks through the Po Valley, northeastern Italy, and along the Brenner route into Austria.

A SONG TO REMEMBER

THE STORY: Louis Pleyel is not interested in Frederic Chopin, claiming there is already too much musical genius in Paris. He has just ordered Frederic and the irrepressible Jozef Elsner out of his office when Franz Liszt is heard playing a piano in the salon. Frederic recognizes one of his own compositions.

FRANZ LISZT

THE renown of Franz Liszt, that "touchy Hungarian," who as a child had been kissed by Beethoven, was spread over the world. As composer and pianist, he was a vigorous innovator. He had even dared, it was said, to strike the keys with his nose! Whatever the truth of that, he had indeed explored the possibilities of the pianoforte beyond anything ever before attempted.

But his renown was not limited either to his dexterity as a pianist nor to his genius as a composer. Paris was at his feet. No woman of glamor enjoyed greater popularity. There was not a Duchess in all the France of Louis Philippe who would not have been proud to say, "Franz Liszt is mine."

The noblest, the most beautiful women of Europe had sought his attention. The most talented men in music, literature and art called him friend. There was not a salon in Paris to which this bon vivant was not welcome.

Frederic's heart pounded. His mouth was agape. His eyes feasted from afar on Franz Liszt. It was his, Chopin's music, that was guiding the fingers of this immortal. It was the Polonaise in A-flat being played, yes, exactly as it must be played, as Frederic himself had dreamed it would be played.

Louis Pleyel, his coat-ends flying, reached the handsome virtuoso. "Maestro!" He bent low. "Pleyel," Liszt said without looking up, "who wrote this?"

Louis Pleyel turned to his secretary. "Dupont! Who wrote this?"

"Polonaise!" "—Yes." "—Spirit of Poland!" "—Yes." "—Magnificent!" Frederic groped for words. "—Thank you—thank you, Maestro."

THEY played on, together, and for some time the room was filled with no other sound but the tones of Chopin's unfinished polonaise. Then Liszt said: "And you play with spirit, too." "—Thank you, Maestro." "I mean it, Monsieur; you have the fire of a patriot!"

—As to that, Maestro—I don't know—" "I do know! And I should like very much to shake your hand—but I don't want to stop!" —To take the hand of Franz Liszt!

It was Frederic's turn to gulp. Frederic gulped again. Then after his second gulp he was all right. Then he said, with airy exuberance, "If you play the melody and I the bass—" "Excellent!"

Frederic played the bass, Liszt the melody. Then with their free hands they reached one for the other and clasped them warmly. A portion of the score remained to be played. They played on, Liszt and Chopin!

Louis Pleyel coughed in his hand. "My dear Elsner—" "—Eh?" "Two weeks! Is that enough time?"

Jozef Elsner touched his kerchief to his face. "Eh?" Louis Pleyel said: "I am asking if Monsieur Chopin can get a concert ready in two weeks?" "—Louis—" Jozef Elsner's jaw started to work again. But he could not speak.

Louis Pleyel raised his voice: "Isn't that what you came to Paris for?" Frederic was laughing over the melody of the polonaise. But there were tears in Jozef Elsner's eyes. Then he caught his voice. "Yes," he said, nodding. "Naturally. Why else did we come to Paris?" (To Be Continued)
