p. m. after a half hour aboard. When the King came to the Augusta the president said, "I am pleased to see you again. King George had welcomed the president aboard the Renown with 'welcome to my country, Mr. President.'"

On the Augusta a Marine guard of honor met the king, and a navy band played "God Save the King" as he came aboard. Then the president and king met and talked in the admiral's cabin in which President Roosevelt and former Prime Minister Churchill had composed the Atlantic charter. A crowd lined the Plymouth shore in the warm sunshine to see the two ships riding in the harbor.

At the luncheon on the Renown, Secretary of State James Byrnes, the Earl of Halifax, British ambassador to the U. S. Sir Alan Lascelles, the king's private secretary and Admiral Sir Ralph Leatham ate with the president and his majesty.

The budget was based on the assumption that the Japanese war would continue at least through June 3, 1946, the end of the current fiscal year. Smith declined to say whether another budget had been prepared for us in event the war ends suddenly.

The expected revenue decrease will not result from lower tax rates, instead, it reflected new business tax legislation, lower than expected sales of surplus property, and a drop in individual income taxes. This latter is the result of the unemployment brought on by war production cut backs.

Sheriff Joe Mrasek said Andrews came to his home late Wednesday evening and told him he had stabbed Stumpf. Mrasek immediately started a hunt for Stumpf to ascertain the extent of his injuries, but was unable to find him. Andrews told Mrasek the trouble had started from an argument over a pension, the sheriff said. Meanwhile, Night Policeman Harry Plybon had summoned Deputy Sheriff Emery Doody to down town Plattsmouth where Stumpf was seeking a physician. None was available and Stumpf was taken to a Murray physician. Stumpf told Doody the two had argued over fishing lines.

be discharged within 12 months after V-E day.

Meanwhile, Stimson revealed Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson is studying with War Mobilization Director John W. Snyder the feasibility of releasing coal miners from the army to boost production of needed fuel.

Under the present point system and under the proposed revision, a total of 1,500,000 men and women will have been discharged by next June 1, Stimson said.

An additional 500,000 will have been released for illness and other reasons not connected with the point plan, making the total 2,000,000. This is the overall figure announced last May when the point system was promulgated. At that time, however it was thought 1,300,000 would be released on points and 700,000 for other reasons.

New inductions meanwhile will maintain the army's strength for the Pacific war at the 6,968,000 figure stated last May.

The critical score under which enlisted personnel become eligible for discharge will stand at 85 points, accumulated as of May 12, until 800,000 persons presently eligible have been released, Stimson said.

Movement Started For New Slavonic State for 'Wends'

LONDON (AP)—A new European state called "Wend" will come into being in Europe if a movement just started in London is successful.

It would be a Slavonic state carved from old Germany and might contain about 100,000 people.

The program for such a state has been started by a "Wendish national committee" under Joseph Worly, whose mother comes from a Wend family and who is a member of those people by adoption.

Wend was the name originally applied by Germans in ancient times to all Slavonic peoples of those groups and tribes which filtered westward into what later became Germany.

They were centered in Lusatania, just north of modern Czechoslovakia, and in Saxony.

In modern times the name was applied to Slavonic peoples living in Lusatania. Most recent figures showed about 60,000 in Lusatania and about half that number in Saxony using the name of Wend. The larger group of Slavonic peoples in the same area, which include such towns as Cottbus, Sorau, Spremberg, call themselves Sorbs.

Worly, who came to Britain in 1940, said he had written about the movement to the British foreign secretary, the United States Secretary of State and British Field Marshall B. L. Montgomery. He has been married for two years to a Manchester nurse who he says, "is very loyal to my political ideas."
