

Turns Down Fortune To Be Movie Actor

HOLYWOOD, Oct. 17. (UP) — Lionel Goetz, 19, who turned down his family's Missouri brewing fortune to become a movie actor, today worked as a delivery boy in an expensive movie colony florist shop in order to meet movie stars.

Goetz, employed under the name of Lionel Shelley which he picked to use on the screen, said he took the job because he wanted to "become a movie actor the hard way."

"I never want it said I landed a job because of family connections or pull," he said.

After a few months learning the brewery business from his Grandfather, William L. Goetz, 78, President of the Goetz Brewing Co., St. Joseph, Mo., the youth said he left home to lead a dance band.

Goetz said he took the job in the florist shop because it was patronized by movie celebrities and gave him a chance to "study the stars." After hours, he said, he was taking dramatic lessons.

The defendants were indicted individually and as members of 13 organizations "which should be declared criminal by reason of their aims and the means used for the accomplishment thereof."

These organizations included the entire general staff and high command of the German armed forces as well as the Gestapo and the SS. Conviction of the 24 leaders and a decision that the indicted nazi organizations are criminal in nature would doom thousands of nazi small fry.

All but one of the 24 defendants are held in allied custody near Nuremberg. Martin Bormann, Hitler's deputy, is at large but was indicted with the rest to make sure he does not escape eventual justice.

The other 23 are expected to be given about a month to prepare their cases. Then they will go on trial before a four-power tribunal of which Francis Biddle, former attorney general, is the U. S. member. Robert H. Jackson, supreme court justice and also former attorney general, is the prosecutor for the U. S. and signed the indictment for this country.

The indictment traces the history of the "Master Race" from the origin of the nazi party in 1919 to its doom last June. It is a story of barbarous atrocities, inhumane persecutions and slavery, large-scale plunder, and want on devastation unmatched on such a scale in the history of mankind.

Many of the details of nazi terrorism have been known for a long time. The indictment is the first official attempt to set down the entire sordid story of the nazi bid to rule the world.

Each of the defendants is charged with responsibility for plotting and helping execute seven wars of aggression which are now known as World War II. They face almost certain execution.

Adolf Hitler, who is believed dead but whose body has not been found, and two other top nazis—Josef Paul Goebbels and Heinrich Himmler, who committed suicide—are missing from the list.

The scope of the criminal activities of these men is only indicated in the indictment. For example, it lists only "samples" of the number of murders known to have been committed at specified places. But those total 9,381,986—for which each of the criminals must atone—and do not include numerous references in the indictment to the "hundreds," "thousands," and "tens of thousands" of other murdered. These are in addition to millions of battle casualties. The great majority of the civilian exterminations occurred in eastern Europe.

In one concentration camp alone—Auschwitz, Poland—4,000,000 persons were "exterminated."

France alone was plundered of approximately a trillion francs ($200,000,000,000 in prewar value) worth of materials, equipment, produce and money—not counting devastation.

The material loss in Soviet Russia—which bore the brunt of nazi savagery—was placed at 679,000,000,000 rubles (about $339,500,000,000).

Nazi persecutions left "only remnants" of Europe's Jewish population, of the 9,000,000 Jews under nazi domination, it is "conservatively estimated" that 5,700,000 have disappeared.

Nearly 100,000,000 persons were deported from their homelands by the nazis for forced labor battalions.

The methods of torture devised by the fanatical nazis ranged from their much-publicized noisome gas chambers and wagons, some of which "broke down" from overwork, to the "iron helmet," a medieval torture instrument. Other methods included freezing to death in icy water, hanging, shooting, starvation, kickings, beatings, the use of hot irons, pulling out of finger nails, deliberate exposure of concentration camp victims to typhus and other deadly diseases, disemboweling, sterilization of women, and the use of victims as guinea pigs in experimental operations.

Germany, it will become a universal problem which all nations will be forced to consider."

His equally anti-semitic colleague Julius Streicher contended: "The sun will not shine on the nations of the earth until the last Jew is dead."

In addition to Goering, the fat drug-addicted nazi air marshal who established the first concentration camps as far back as 1933; Hess, who as Hitler's deputy flew to Britain in search of a "phony" peace, and Ribbentrop, the double-crossing former champagne salesman turned nazi diplomat, the defendants include:

Ernst Kaltenbunner, Austrian terrorist and SS leader; Alfred Rosenberg, nazi editor and Jew baiter; Hans Frank, Governor-general of Poland; Bormann, successor to Hess and still at large; Wilhelm Frick, interior minister and director of lands seized by the nazis; Ley, labor leader; Fritz Sauckel, head of the slave labor organization; Albert Speer, Abuser and exploiter of human beings in the slave labor program; Walter Funk, minister of economics; Hjalmar Schacht, finance wizard; Franz von Papen, diplomat and master of duplicity; Gustav Krupp von Bohlen and Halback, head of Krupp munitions industry; Constantin von Neurath, former Foreign minister; Baldur von Schirach, youth leader; Arthur Seyss-Inquart, Austrian "Quisling"; Streicher, Jew baiter; Field Marshal Wilhelm Keitel, chief of the high command; Col. Gen. Alfred Jodl, member of the general staff who signed armistice at Reims; Grand Admiral Erich Raeder of the navy; Grand Admiral Karl Doenitz, submarine corps commander; Hans Fritzsche, propaganda chief and head of DNB news agency.

Germany and the nazi party violated virtually every law and custom of the civilized world and the indictment named the nazi party as "the central core of hate common plan or conspiracy" for world domination.

In the course of that conspiracy—put down at such terrific loss of life and wealth—the indictment charged that:

1. The nazis "exhorted" Japan to attack the United States to weaken the allies.

2. Germany was guilty of 64 violations of 26 international treaties she signed, dating back to the Hague convention of 1889 and including the Versailles and Locarno treaties as well as the Munich agreement.

3. American prisoners of war were murdered in Normandy and in the Ardennes in 1944, and were starved, beaten and otherwise mistreated in prisoner-of-war camps in 1943, 1944 and 1945.

4. Annihilation of the Jews became "an official state policy" soon after the nazis gained control of Germany.

5. Hitler and his gang recognized after the bloodless conquests of Austria and Czechoslovakia that further "successes" could not be achieved without war.

The indictment named the dates of meetings of high nazis which planned each of Germany's aggressive steps—sometimes months in advance.

The indictment was signed by Jackson for the United States, Francois de Menthon for France, Hartley Shawcross for Great Britain, and R. A. Rudenko for Soviet Russia.

Jackson set the tone for these trials in his recent report to president Truman when he said:

"I think that through these trials we should be able to establish that a process of retributive steps—sometimes months in advance.

The future similarly attack civilization... of this war should come unthinkably rules and workable machinery from which any who might contemplate another war of Brigandage would know that they would be held personally responsible and punished.
