Mrs. Lillian Epstein took in $5,000 for being belted by a mail truck in New York; a couple of dozen other people also collected for being hit by federal automobiles. I hate to say it but the government obviously is a reckless driver.

Wastepaper Basket

The wastepaper basket did the damage in the Albany, N. Y., post-office, by getting in the way of Francis A. Hanley, a clerk with an arm full of mail. Congress passed a special bill authorizing him to collect for damage done to himself.

There was the sad case of Miss Sybil Georgette Townsend, freshly enlisted in the army's female air corps. She was on the way from Chicago to Sweetwater, Tex. for training when the army decided it didn't need any lady airplane pilots. "Who's going to pay for my railroad ticket?" Sybil asked. "Search us," the army said. Congress forked up the $59.

Golden Eagle

The golden eagle, one of the last of the old side-wheelers plying the Mississippi out of St. Louis, stove herself in on some hidden piles, which showed on no government chart. More trouble-congress said it would pay whatever was right to the Eagle Picket Co.

Esther L. Berg fell down the slippery front steps of the veterans hospital in Portland, Ore., fracturing her fibula. Congress gave her $2,472.54. Mrs. Lionel Comeau, riding on a New Orleans street car when hit by a navy bus received $2,570.97. The street car company got $1,570.97 to patch its street car.

An army airplane fell on the house of Harriett Townsend Bottomley at Old Brookville, N. Y. This did her home no good; congress handed her $8,500 to rebuild it.

The postoffice department refused to pay the toll every day over the Eagle point bridge at Dubuque, Ia., for one of its rural mail carriers. He kept on crossing the bridge; he also kept on not paying; congress received a bill of $481.67 for accumulated bridge tolls.

You see how it is, taxpayers. What we need is a blanket policy to pay for our government's blunders.

Byrnes also told his press conference late Wednesday that the state department was not consulted either on the plan to send Marines to North China or the poen to use U. S. warships to transfer Chiang's troops there. He sharply denied that it had been a political move to strengthen Chiang—as charged by the Chinese Communists. He said it was purely a military matter involving the Japanese surrender.

Mrs. Hope Jones will assist Mrs. White with the nursery. They are the only two appointed to run the school for the time being.

During the time he was recovering from his injuries, he stated that he received poor care and one leg was bad for nine months. He said that information, often months old, was dangerously smuggled to the prisoners or sometimes they were able to pick up bits of information from loose-tongued Jap guards. The boys in the camp did not expect the war to end for another six or eight months but were gratefully surprised when the end came.

After his capture by the enemy, more than a year elapsed before his parents had any word of his whereabouts and finally a shortwave broadcast was picked up in which Benny spoke. All though recordings were sent to his mother, there was no confirmation and finally a post card came to her and she recognized her son's handwriting. During the time he was in prison, he received but three cards from his parents although they had written to him regularly at weekly intervals.

Leaves Japan
He was taken out of Japan by the Navy and wrote his first letter home on September 20, 1945. He was at the fleet hospital in Guam for a time to receive treatment before sailing for San Francisco. His mother reports that he is now in good health. He will be at home for ninety days on a re-
