Undergoing Treatment

Dick March has been at the Veterans Hospital in Lincoln for the past four weeks undergoing treatment for an infection in his left hand. Because of the mysterious nature of the trouble, he has had no response to treatment and last week he underwent a painful operation when surgeons tried to cut out the infection.

It is thought that his trouble might be a foreign skin disease picked up when he was in service with the Seabees in the Pacific theater of operations during the war. Dick was discharged early last fall after three years service, most of it spent overseas.

He is located in Ward 3, Room 342 at the Veterans hospital and he expects to be there indefinitely pending the condition of his hand.

Nylon Shipments Go To Mexico to Avoid U. S. Ceiling Prices

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Some of those nylons you can't get are being shipped to Mexico where they bring prices ranging up to $50 a pair, it was learned Monday. At least 648,000 pairs have been shipped into Mexico during the last two weeks, it was reported.

Officials at the southwest Philadelphia airport said 68 cartons of the hose flown from there Saturday and at least 12 cartons, containing 2,160 pairs each, have been shipped directly into Mexico.

Most of the shipments are consigned to Brownsville, Dallas, Fort Worth and Corpus Christi, Tex., for ultimate transfer across the border, it was said.

An airplane employe at Dallas told the United Press that 1,200 pounds of nylons were flown to Corpus Christi Sunday. They were destined for sale in Mexico, he said, and another 2,200 pounds were at the terminal awaiting shipment.

"They were stacked in the seats and in the aisles," he said. Employees at the Philadelphia airport said some of the nylons came from New York but the most of them were manufactured in Philadelphia.

Shipping the nylons across the border where there are no price ceilings is perfectly legal, it was pointed out. Authorities at Brownsville, Tex., said they could pass border inspection as long as the proper duties were paid on them.

Surplus Property Under Lesion Eye INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—Hundred of complaints of veterans that they are blocked from purchase of surplus property as provided by law have brought a statement from National Commander John Stelle that this situation will receive the immediate aggressive attention of The American Legion.

The national commander has called on all World War II veterans and all Legionnaires who have been deprived of their rights to report their experiences to the national public relations division of The American Legion, 777 North Meridian Street, Indianapolis 6, Indiana.

"All such individual reports will be checked and passed on to the proper authorities in Washington," Commander Stelle said. "The American Legion will follow through to assist all veterans in every way it can to secure their rights."

Commander Stelle said all complaints will be catalogued by states. Copies will be sent to local posts and state headquarters of the American Legion to secure their cooperation in effective action.

"If we find any grounds for any criminal prosecution in any case I will refer the matter to our national judge advocate for appropriate legal action," Commander Stelle emphasized. "The American Legion will act without fear or favor."

New Legion Show Is On Delinquency

INDIANAPOLIS Ind.—How to deal in an enlightened manner with juvenile delinquency, one of America's pressing postwar problems, will be dramatized on The American Legion's 15-minute transcribed radio program, "This Is Our Duty," to be heard during the week of March 17 over more than 600 broadcasting stations throughout the nation.

Featuring the seventh episode of The American Legion's 1946 radio series, the story is told by Betty Barrett, a typical 17-year-old girl as she relates the problems of juveniles in war time and of the postwar era. As the story unfolds, the program dramatizes the way in which the problem was solved in the community in which Betty lives.

"This Is Our Duty," depicting the various activities of The American Legion, is now heard over more radio stations in the United States than any other program on the air today.
