Pick Declares River Program To Aid Midwest

The growth of cities and towns of the midwestern states as a result of the Missouri river development program is practically a certainty, Maj. Gen. Lewis Pick told an audience of approximately 400 persons who jammed the Glenwood, Iowa, armory Monday night to hear the man who has been largely responsible for the program of work that is now getting underway on the Missouri river.

Speaking to an audience of business and professional men and farmers from western Iowa and eastern Nebraska, General Pick said there wasn't a shadow of a doubt but what the development of flood control, navigation, irrigation and secondary power to be realized through the construction of dams in the upper Missouri river basin would bring more industries to the centralwestern states and thus spur the growth of cities and towns, particularly along the Missouri river.

Main Trouble With River

He pointed out that the small state of Rhode Island no has as many industries as the ten states that border on the Missouri river mainly because of Rhode river, the navigable waters of the Atlantic ocean offering low freight rates as an inducement to the establishment of industries. The main trouble with the Missouri river in the past has been floods and drought, General Pick declared. The construction of the series of dams now planned under the program he has sponsored will eliminate those blights on the centralwestern states, he stated.

Tells of Garrison Dam

He told of the work that is soon to get underway on the construction of the mammoth Garrison dam in North Dakota. Twenty-one million acres of water will be backed up behind the Garrison dam, he said, comparing that to the 16 million acres of water behind the Fort Peck dam in Montana.

Attending the meeting from Plattsburgh were Edward Egenberger, president of the Plattsburgh Chamber of Commerce, T. H. Pollock, chairman of the Chamber's Missouri River Improvement committee; Robert Cappell, co-chairman of the committee; A. L. Tidd, D. L. Grove, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Spangler, Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Davis, Eugene Bushnell, William Milliron and Tom Solomon. The proposal as submitted in the election was drawn up under a statute which provides that 60 per cent of the votes cast in the election must be in favor of the issue in order for the proposal to be approved.

35 New Homes Needed Locally

Plattsburgh has an immediate need for thirty-five new homes and many more apartments if the acute housing is to be eliminated, it was brought out in a round table discussion in the office of Price administrator in the courthouse Friday afternoon. It also was agreed by those in attendance that there were no violations of price ceilings in building materials.

The discussion was called by Harvey Gamer, county head of the OPA, and it was led by Thomas Spaulding, Omaha OPA representative. Edward Egenberger, president of the Plattsburgh Chamber of Commerce Don J. Arundel, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, E. J. Richey, operator of the Riches Lumber company J. L. Behrends, county superintendent of schools; the Rev. H. J. McCluskey, and B. J. Alcott, manager of the Plattsburgh Daily Journal, met with the OPA representatives. It was planned for a discussion panel of some fifteen, but others were unable to attend.

No Lumber Here It was brought out that there is not enough lumber in the two local yards to build one home and that the main problem is to obtain building supplies for retail locally. Help is not a drawback, it was agreed, for many contractors have men who are waiting to go to work.

As the panel discussion progressed, it was brought out that in the majority of cases there seemed to be no excessive rentals nor excessive prices being paid for homes, although one or two were cited and analyzed. A full discussion then was held on ways and means to eliminate the immediate housing shortage here.

One suggestion was made about the buildings north of town on the rifle range, but disposition of the buildings was too uncertain. Another was the razing and moving of vacant farm buildings in the area close to town, the report being that there are about fifty within a radius of ten miles.

The suggestions were discussed and it was decided that the costs would be too exorbitant to do anything with them.

Many veterans are inquiring of Behrends, service officer, about possible housing facilities, and he advised that about ten would and could build immediately if the materials were available. Further information will be obtained and possible concentrated action planned.
