He is now enjoying a furlough with relatives and friends prior to reporting at the Great Lakes naval center where he expects to receive his discharge. He was the guest of his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. George Winkler Monday and also visited friends. in the planting area before the seeds were sown.

Different Seeds Tested Two different seed mixtures were used. Five hundred acres were planted with Douglas fir and Port Oxford cedar. The remaining area was planted with Douglas fir Sitka spruce and western hemlock. In the Polk county site the only seed used was Port Oxford cedar, which is so small, rodents do not bother it.

Both areas will be checked at regular intervals during the next few years to determine the extent of germination and survival of seedlings. Results of the experiment will not be known definitely for several years.

Meantime, foresters are crossing their fingers in hopes that the new process may save many tedious hours of back-breaking labor or required to plant by hand. But the main possibility for which the foresters watch is that this new method of planting may seed up Oregon's diminishing tree population.

'Bonuses' Send Prices Sky High On British Cars

LONDON (AP)—Booming prices for both old and new automobiles today posed a new problem for overworked government offices. Every succeeding auction of used or demobilized vehicles has produced more fantastic prices. Reports of "off the record" price deals for new cars and "bonus" payments for used cars from dealers add to the problem.

A 1939 Rolls-Royce, with 10,000 or more miles registered, can be obtained for $20,000. It cost $6,600 when new. The 1946 model of the same car, plus purchase tax, is listed at $15,844.

With such prices prevailing for cars in A-1 condition, would-be buyers are being forced to compete in a "sky's-the-limit" battle for less desirable vehicles at even worse proportionate prices.

Reports claim that some dealers can provide new cars with an extra $1,500 "off the record" payment. Another case listed an extra payment of $800 for the purchase of a new Riley and on an Austin a bonus of $400 was asked above the selling price.

Most of Britain's new cars are going for export business. The end of the war and the hope for a speedy end to gasoline rationing

David Elson Parker, of Columbus, Ohio is only 4, but he has already shown initiative and enterprise as a businessman. Capitalizing on the lawnmower shortage he bought four live mowers—goats—and put out an ad similar to that shown in inset. He rents the goats out small ones for $1.00 a week, medium goats $1.25, and large ones $1.50. "And it doesn't cost anything extra for milk," he points out, "if you want to milk them. They're always eating and that's what makes them such good lawnmowers." He is planning to buy 20 more goats, and from the profits buy a pony for himself.

has renewed the public demand for automobiles. Hopes that auctions conducted by the Ministry of Supply would provide cars at a reasonable price have been shattered by the unexplainable behavior of purchasers in bidding almost any price for anything with four wheels and an engine.

Rush to Auctions Thousands of buyers from all parts of the country rushed to Dunsford, Surrey, recently for the sale of 225 former government cars and commercial vehicles. Wild prices were paid for cars that were far from perfect—most of them could not even be driven away from the depot.

With 6,000 persons bidding at Dunsford, auctioneers sold a car a minute. The first car to go was a 1941 Austin 8, which brought $740, although the auctioneer's offer to start bidding at $200 brought an opening offer of $20.

One of the examples was a 1939 Morris 8, which when new sold for $585—but brought $1,050, even though it had to be towed away. Trucks brought the heaviest bid
