Yoschar-Younger Cousins Exchanged

MURRAY, (Special) — Miss Mary Ellen Yoschar and Howard Younger of near Union were married at a quiet ceremony at Hi-Matha, Kans., Friday afternoon. They were attended by the brother-in-law and sister of the groom, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Poutas, for whom they were recently married.

The bride wore a blue linen and white accessories. She graduated from Plattsouth high school in 1943 and has since been employed by the Plattsouth Manufacturing Co. The groom was recently discharged from the navy after three years of service.

After a short wedding trip the couple will be at home on a farm east of Union.

With the OPA unsettled, dealers in the produce and creamery business are at sea on what to do in regard to prices on butterfat, eggs, poultry and feed....The best we can do is work on a day to day basis and pay the best price we can on the day's market until congress and the president come to some kind of an agreement or prices settle to a level with no OPA. We thank you for being considerate with the rise and fall of prices until this mad world gets back on its feet again.

Othman Gives Report in International Finance as Regards Loan to Britain

By Frederick C. Othman
WASHINGTON (UP)—His majesty's government seems to have joined me in going easy on the butter. Were waiting for some clearance sales.

What brings this up is President Truman using 16 pens to put a shaky signature a few days back on the $3,750,000,000 loan to Great Britain. Then the Treasury Department announced it had shipped the British a first installment of 300,000,000 to spend any way they pleased.

I kept an eye on the financial pages to see whether the British had found any good buys, but results were nil. No news. So I got to talking to some fellows with London accents (they spell check, cheque) and so it is that I can tell you about the chancellor of the exchequer. He is no champagne Charlie. He's got millions to spend, and billions more where that came from, but if he can't buy stuff at a reasonable price, the hell with it. My sentiments, exactly.

His ideals that the British have downed so much macaroni and Brussels sprouts they deserve a few other things to eat, such as oranges. Have you bought any oranges lately? Then you've got the answer.

No Dress for Miss Peck
I spent a while in London this summer and I had hoped that the loan might result in a new dress for people like Miss Peck, of Herbert Crescent, Knightsbridge, who was my landlady. She had worn the same old brown suit since the beginning of the war. It was so baggy that she long since had stopped looking at herself in the mirror.

She is out of luck. The loan will provide her no frock with ribbons on it. My experts got to talking gibberish about trade balances and sterling accounts; it seemed to add up to the fact that the British government intends to buy only the things the country has to have, such as food and as little of that as possible.

One of the things that pained me in London was the fact that the restaurants closed around 7 p. m. Anybody who got hungry later in the evening, like me, stayed hungry the rest of the night. This unhappy situation is going to continue.

Don't Dare Tell
It was almost impossible in London to buy anything in the way of a tweed suit, or a bottle of Scotch whisky, or even a London pipe. These things were being shipped abroad to help balance the budget. My financial friends say the loan isn't going to change that, either.

I told 'em about the only things I saw for sale in London without coupons were walking sticks and top hats, mostly gray. They said this was because there wasn't much of an international demand for canes, or gray toppers, either.

They also said they'd like to tell me what they hoped to buy with their first 300,000,000, but that they didn't dare. I'd print it. So if they wanted a couple thousand gross of teacups, for instance the teacup makers would gang up and raise the price.

The trouble with this loan is that the British have got to pay interest on it and if they don't get their money's worth, their taxpayers will be in a tough spot. They're spending it carefully, exactly what they buy, and they're not going to announce any, and they think it'll be some time before Miss Peck can throw away the old suit, which (according to her) makes her look like a scow.

The chancellor and I, meantime before Miss Peck can throw her prices and eating our bread dry. End report on international finance.

Murray Woman's Mother Dies

MURRAY, (Special)—Funeral services were held Monday in Lincoln for Mrs. Minnie Brown, mother of Mrs. Lloyd Leyda of Murray, who died, presumably from a heart attack at her home in Lincoln Wednesday night.

Mrs. Brown had visited for two weeks with Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd and was taken home Wednesday evening. She was found lying on the floor of her apartment the following morning by friends who investigated when they were unable to arouse her.

Her husband, Dr. Brown, died in 1926. They had lived in Lincoln for several years.

Surviving in addition to Mrs. Leyda is a son, who was unable to attend the services. He lives in Syracuse, N. Y.

Rites Held Sunday for Mrs. Mick

GREENWOOD, (Special)—Funeral services were held Sunday at the Greenwood Christian church for Mrs. John Mick, 72, who died Thursday in Lincoln. Rev. Ray Magnusson in charge. Burial was in Waverly.

Survivors are her husband, three daughters, Mrs. Geneva Hughes of Lincoln, Mrs. Emma Benson of Hastings and Mrs. Hazel Oederling of Beaver Crossing; three sons, Lloyd and Ruel, both of Greenwood, and Paul of Falls City; two sisters, Mrs. Jessie Ward of Prairie Home and Mrs. Mae Bray of Lincoln; three brothers, Gus Welch of Prairie Home, James Leroy Welch of Omaha and Clyde A. Welch of St. Joseph, Mo.; and eight grandchildren and two great grandchildren.
