Anderson Case Expected To Go To Jury Tuesday

The case of second degree murder against Dr. James C. Anderson, Omaha physician, which is now being tried at Council Bluffs, Ia., was expected to go to the jury late Tuesday or Wednesday.

Being tried in connection with the death of Miss Marian Blyth of Council Bluffs, Dr. Anderson was on the witness stand all day Monday. Dr. Anderson testified throughout the morning in his own behalf and was cross-examined by the county attorney during the afternoon.

Rebuttal witnesses were heard Tuesday morning and the case was to go to the jury after the final summaries. The jury is composed of eleven women and one man.

He stated had charged that Miss Blyth died last April as a result of an illegal operation performed by Dr. Anderson and that following the girl's death her body was thrown into the Missouri river by Dr. Anderson and "others."

Her body was found in the Missouri river last April 29.

Dies At Home
Miss Blyth died at the home of Mrs. Jesse Middleton, operator of an Omaha convalescent home.

During the trial, the prosecution attempted to prove that Miss Blyth died as a result of an operation performed by Anderson. However, Mrs. Middleton testified Friday that the operation was not performed by Dr. Anderson and that the girl had informed her that she had performed the operation upon herself.

The death of Miss Blyth and subsequent investigation received much publicity here this spring.

Thieves Butcher Three Steers, Steal Calves At William Galloway Farm

Ruthless cattle butchers slaughtered three steers at the William Galloway farm, near Cullom, recently and also stole two small calves, it was learned here this week.

The thieves butchered the three steers on the Galloway property, and left remains scattered about the scene of their crime. The three steers which were killed weighed approximately 500 pounds apiece.

Striking at their prey sometime during the night, the thieves left only the heads and the hides of two of the animals. After slaughtering the third animal, they took the hind quarters and part of the fore quarters, and left the rest of the meat behind. It is thought they may have been frightened away from the farm before they completed butchering the third steer.

The two small calves also disappeared at about the same time and it is assumed that the same persons who killed the larger animals also stole the calves. Since the calves were smaller they could have been easily loaded into a truck.

Mr. Galloway reported that the thieves left no clues.

It is thought that the "meat bandits" may have been part of a ring of slaughterers who have raided other farms in eastern Nebraska since the outset of the nationwide meat shortage.

Gridmen Drill For Ashland

Continuing their drills for the Ashland game Friday night, the Plattsmouth high school Blue Devils grid squad drove through a lengthy scrimmage session at the Athletic field Tuesday evening.

The Blue Devils will open their Eastern Nebraska Six conference schedule at Ashland. They finished second in the conference last year.

Coach Merle Stewart scouted Ashland Friday afternoon when they battled Cathedral at Omaha and came back with the report that the Ashland team will be "fast and rangy." Ashland beat College View 6-0 and then dropped their second game to Cathedral by a 12-0 count.

Coach Stewart will send his team through another long scrimmage Wednesday afternoon and then taper-off with a light drill Thursday. Twenty-four players probably will make the trip to Ashland. The team has been bolstered this week by the return of Charles (Bud) Eaton and Kenneth Harold.

The Plattsmouth team scrimmaged the Louisville high school team under the floodlights here Tuesday evening. The Louisville squad had not worked out under the lights, so the evening scrimmage was held instead of the usual afternoon drill to familiarize the Louisville gridmen with the night conditions.

The Blue Devils used several new plays against the Louisville team, and Coach Stewart planned to continue work on the new offensive attack during Wednesday's work out.

Peterson Decrys Sorrell Stand On State Roads

Val Peterson, Republican gubernatorial candidate fired the opening gun as his party's caravan started on its second week of tour Monday. And, Peterson aimed the gun at his Democratic opponent, Frank Sorrell.

Speaking at Gering, Peterson charged Sorrell with being a "new dealer." "Not only does my opponent belong to the New Deal Party," he said, "but he is full of fanciful and costly schemes just like the starchy eyed boys in Washington."

Peterson articularly took issue with Sorrells proposal concerning farm to market roads.

Peterson charged Sorrell with "trying to play on the emotions of the voters without regard for the reality of the situation."

"The one and only thing standing in the way of expanding and improving Nebraska's road system, is the New Deal's financial irresponsibility which has produced inflation and provoked scarcities," Peterson said.

For his part, Sorrell questioned Peterson's stand on foreign policy. Noting that the American Legion Executive Committee at San Francisco had declared in favor of backing the strong foreign policy of Secretary of State James F. Byrnes at Paris, Sorrell asked Peterson to state his position.

"Val Peterson boasts of his membership in the Legion," Sorrell said. "I ask him to follow the Legion in this matter, or is he backing Senator Butler and the Republican congressmen who are advocating appeasement of Russia?"

The Democratic party's agricultural advisory committee met at Grand Island and adopted resolutions endorsing President Truman's and Secretary of Agriculture Anderson's stand in maintaining controls on meat.
