POISON IVY

A U. S. GOVERNMENT BUREAU REPORT announces the discovery of a new tannic acid treatment for ivy poisoning. The treatment has been found excellent; it is gentle and safe, dries up the blisters in a surprisingly short time—often within 24 hours. These government findings are incorporated in the new product—

NIGHT SHIFT WORKERS can HAVE COOL DAYTIME SLEEP

... in houses that are insulated with Barrett ROCK WOOL

ROCK WOOL is literally a huge protective blanket that shuts out much of the broiling heat of the sun all day—keeps the night's coolness within your house during the day... and needless to say, in winter it keeps heat from seeping out through walls, ceilings and roof.

You'll be glad to know how easy it is to have your home insulated with Barrett ROCK WOOL, and how it will in a few short years pay for itself in fuel savings!

XXXI
AT two o'clock that Friday afternoon, Rose was in the parlor, lackadaisically running through the Charles Wakefield Cadman album, when she saw Mrs. Kerr coming along the pavement toward the Cameron porch. It must mean a telephone call, she thought. She got up from the piano and went to the door.
"For you," Mrs. Kerr said. "A man, he's holding the line."
"Long distance?" Rose thought of Dixon.
Mrs. Kerr said no. "I didn't recognize the voice, Rose. Someone who hasn't called before."
Rose shut the door and followed Mrs. Kerr to the cottage. She felt unaccountably nervous, and her hand jiggled as she picked up the receiver. Of course, she was being silly. It couldn't possibly be—"Hello," she said, in a strange, timid sort of tone. Mrs. Kerr discreetly withdrew.
"Rose?"
She didn't answer immediately. "Hello, Rose? Is that you, honey? Know who this is?"
"Yes," she said.
"I haven't seen you in a coon's age, honey, but I still think about you. Do you ever think about me?"
"Yes," she said, "Sometimes."
"I'm leaving Blakeville today, leaving for good and won't be back. I kind of wanted to tell you goodby. I'll never forget you, Rose."
She said, "I'll never forget you, either," and added, as if the words were not to be repressed: "I wish I could."
A pause, and then he said: "I never knew what happened to us, why you bumped me off like that. I've been in and out of town most of the summer, Rose. I've hung around the park a hundred times, hoping you'd show up; but you didn't. I've wanted to telephone, but I was afraid to, not knowing what you'd say. And I was kind of mad, too."

you love and trust me."
She was silent, clinging to the telephone with rigid fingers.
"Come on, honey. Get that four o'clock traction. Please do!" His voice implored, and even over the wire the spell of it reached her. "I've been so lonely for you, Rose. Every day, every hour, feeling so bad because you turned me down."
She listened, and believed. "I'll come," she said. "I'll come."
"But if you're leaving—"
"I'm going up to Ashiron Springs to stay the week-end. You know where that is? Up the river thirty miles, the resort place with the nice little tavern. It's very respectable, and not many people there at the end of the season. I'm taking the traction and have only a few minutes to make it." He paused. "Look, Rose, why don't you meet me at Ashiron this evening? You could catch the five o'clock traction."
"Oh, no," she said. "No!"
"Wait!" His voice was warm and lover. "You're thinking how I tried to fake about our going to Chicago. You never liked it, you were insulted, weren't you? Only married couples could go on trips together, you said."
"Yes, I said that."
"But what if I told you this is strictly on the level? It is, Rose. You come up to Ashiron and see Mr. and Mrs. Breen, that's how it'll be in the register. Honest."
"You mean—you don't mean—"
She had to stop; the world seemed to stop around her.
"I mean you're the only girl I've ever loved, and I've got to see you tonight. At Ashiron, please!"
"You're asking me to—to elope—"
"Well, I can't tell you too much on the telephone, but it will be all right and just the way you want it."
"Is there a minister at Ashiron—a church?"
"What? Oh, yes. Don't worry. I said on the level, didn't I. You trust me, don't you?"
"But it's so—I don't know what to think!"
"The whole thing is whether

California truck farmers have been warned that a pair of giant snails, like that pictured above, have been found in San Pedro. They are known to entomologists as Achatina Fulcia, world's largest and most voracious species, capable of multiplying astronomically and "literally eating Southern California out of its truck gardens." The invaders came in on clods of dirt adhering to Army surplus material shipped from Tinian Island in the South Pacific.

why art thou disquieted within me? hope thou in God: for I shall yet praise him, who is the health of my countenance, and my God" (Psalms 42:11). Other Bible citations include, "Blessed is the man whom thou choosest, and causest to approach unto thee, that he may dwell in thy courts: we shall be gratified with the goodness of thy house, even of thy holy temple" (Psalms 65:4).

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Soul, or Spirit, is God, unchangeable and eternal; and man co-exists with and reflects Soul, God, for man is God's image" (p.120).
