CONSUMERS PUBLIC POWER DISTRICT

Born in St. Louis in 1805, Peter Sarpy opened a fur trading post at the present site of Bellevue, Nebraska, in 1823, becoming the first white settler on the west bank of the Missouri. His success with the Indians was phenomenal. He married Nicomi, daughter of an Iowa chief, was given the Indian name of "White Chief" by the Otoes and Omahas. A firm believer in the future of Nebraska and surrounding territory, Sarpy accumulated a number of firsts for his record. He established the first ferries across the Missouri, Loup and Elkhorn Rivers, laid out the towns of Bellevue and Decatur, introduced the first steam ferry on the Mitsouri and obtained friendly passage with the Indians for John C. Fremont and Brigham

Young on their westward treks. He died in 1862 at Pisttsmouth before realizing his dream of see-
