IT'S HARD TO MAKE ENDS MEET!

Having trouble making ends meet? Most everyone is. We in the gas business are experiencing some of the same difficulty, especially when it comes to parcelling out our present supply of Natural Gas to everyone who wants it for house heating.

We had hoped to have enough additional gas later this year to take care of the heating requirements not only for new homes but also for some homes with worn-out heating equipment. But the pipeline companies who transport Natural Gas to this area are still having difficulty obtaining large diameter pipe. Therefore, inadequate increases in the amount of gas we expect to receive this year make it necessary for us to limit new gas services for heating to NEW CONSTRUCTION ONLY. By accommodating newly constructed homes, we believe we will be making an important contribution toward the solution of a very critical housing problem. We wish we COULD make ends meet, but until some later date when more pipelines are constructed bringing more gas to this area, we'll simply have to say: "We're sorry."

No curtailment will be placed on the use of Natural Gas for refrigeration, water heating, cooking, or commercial non-space heating uses for present or prospective customers.
