AN IMPORTANT Announcement

TO EVERY PRESENT AND PROSPECTIVE

User of Natural Gas

THERE is no shortage of Natural ■ Gas. The supply is adequate for many years to come. The present problem is one of transporting the gas from the large gas fields of Texas and Oklahoma to this area. This problem results from a shortage of steel with which to build additional pipelines.

The pipeline company has been making every effort for some time to improve this condition, but shortage of steel for pipe has proved to be a "bottleneck". Some relief is anticipated before cold weather sets in, but as yet, it is not definite. Therefore, this Company is obliged to continue certain restrictions as to the use of Natural Gas for space heating.

No "Conversions" Accepted

Because of this condition your gas company is unable to permit the conversion to Natural Gas of furnaces now burning other types of fuel. This means that it will be necessary that those persons now using coal and oil for heating, continue to use their present equipment and fuels for at least another year.

New Construction Only

The pipeline company anticipates that they will be able to make a limited amount of additional Natural Gas available in this area before the next heating season. This limited amount, it is hoped, will be adequate to take care of most of the demand for space heating in new residential construc-

We feel an obligation to new home builders that are faced with heavy investment for heating to provide for their needs so far as possible now, thus eliminating added expense within a few years for gas burning equipment. We also feel that by limiting these services to newly constructed homes we are aiding the critical housing
