With The Pastors

Barton W. Stone's work in creating the movement which has grown into the present brotherhood of free Christian churches grew out of his feeling that all the denominations should cooperate more. During the Great Revival which swept the frontier region in the early 1880's, Barton Stone felt greatly exhilarated as he noticed how pastors and people of many denominations la-rested together in the camp meetings of the times. The appeal of his later preaching, around which grew the movement of Christian churches, was for cooperation and fellowship among the various beliefs and groups.

Growing out of that early sentiment, the plea of the Christian churches has always been for Christian unity. They have prayed for a universal fellowship of believers.

Today, as these Christian churches, or Disciples of Christ, enter the labors of their new crusade for a Christian world, interdenominational cooperation and fellowship is one of the appeals and objectives. The Disciples seek to enlist 1,000 new churches in cooperative programs.

The Christian church of Plattsmouth is supporting this program and appeal. It urges all churchmen in the community to feel a sense of rich Christian fellowship, and commends to them the way of cooperative Christian labors as a means of enriching the total life and spirit of our city. Sherman R. Hanson, Pastor, Plattsmouth Christian Church.

Nebraska Sets Up Industrial Court

LINCOLN, Neb. (U.P.)—Nebraska's court of industrial relations is open and ready for business.

The court was created by the 1947 legislature in an act forbidding strikes within the fields of government service and public utilities. The lawmakers directed the governor to appoint as judges three men experienced in "legal, financial, labor, and industrial matters, and not because they are representatives of capital or labor."

Gov. Val Peterson named three small-town lawyers to serve—Varro E. Tvier, Nebraska City; Arthur J. Denny, Fairbury, and Earl J. Moyer, Madison.

The judges will draw no salary, but will be paid $50 a day for each day's service. Their decisions have the effect of law, and may be appealed only to the state supreme court.

Peterson, who requested the legislation, expects the court to serve labor while at the same time protecting the public from a halt in essential services.

Missouri Revolts Against Valley Flood Control

By ROBERT W. BERNICK United Press Staff Correspondent

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (U.P.)—Ignoring the current trend in other states of the Missouri River basin, Missouri is attempting to work out its own salvation from floods through a co-operative agreement with the federal government.

Missourians seem to want little or no part of a "master" flood control plan which is being backed in neighboring states. That plan, known as the Pick-Sloan program, is sponsored by U. S. Army engineers and the U. S. Reclamation Bureau.

Eighteen "high-level" dams proposed for the state have been held up because of objections of Gov. Phil M. Donnelly and the Missouri legislature.

Neither an "irrigation" state or particularly interested in navigation of the "Big Muddy," which cuts her in half, Missouri wants most of all an answer to the devastating floods which this year cost her $234,486,800 in crop and soil losses in May and June alone.

Many Missouri farmers object to the Pick plan because they contend it will not prevent their farms from washing away, but merely will benefit flood control and navigation on the Mississippi.

The state's population also is divided in allegiance between the proposed Missouri Valley Authority (MVA), embracing widespread hydro-electrical development, and the Pick plan—which is devoted to navigation, irrigation and flood control.

The solution, it is hoped, will be found in an extensive soil conservation program, along with "low-level" dams with a limited back-log of water behind them, and a series of smaller dams on the upper reaches of many streams in the state.

In something of a compromise, proponents of the Pick plan have reached an agreement with the state government for an extensive study of flood conditions on the Osage River—a major tributary of the Missouri.

The survey—which will be used as a blueprint for future flood control programs in the state in lieu of the Pick plan—is being carried out by the soil conservation agencies of the United States Department of Agriculture, the army engineers and the college of agriculture of the University of Missouri.

Participation of the engineers was seen as a turning point in the entire controversy of navigation versus irrigation and flood control as it affects Missouri.
