Odds and Ends On Electricity

These odds and ends of electrical information are provided by E. A. Olson and Jack Steele, extension agricultural engineers.

One kilowatt-hour of electricity will pump a thousand gallons of water from the average farm well.

Daylight bulbs are handy in the laundry room, making it easier to detect spots and stains.

Dark lamp shades absorb light. The same bulb will give 50 per cent more light in a white or ivory shade. Overheating shortens the life of an electric iron.

A 100 watt bulb gives more light than two 50 watt bulbs.

In planning a new house, a good height for placing the convenience outlet for the washer, electric iron, or ironer is about 40 inches from the floor, where it can be reached handily.

The chime of eight bells in the steeple of Boston's Old North Church is the oldest in America. It was hung there in 1744.
