Donna May Philpot, Ruth Ann Hinds and Patricia Heebner returned home Sunday, after a six week visit with relatives at Traverse City, and at Detroit, Michigan.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Shumaker and son Ronney, spent Sunday with friends at Auburn.

Mr. and Mrs. O. V. (Bud) Recker are spending this week at the home of Mr. Recker's sister, Mrs. Granville Heebner, at Nehawka.

Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Harris and two sons, and Miss Elvira Wyan, of Lincoln, were guests at the M. L. Fernbaugh home, last Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Johnson, and family, of Nebraska City, and Mrs. Roy Garrins, of Union, were Sunday guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Johnson.

A group of ten women, all members of the same card club, gathered at the home of Mrs. Don Philpot, Monday evening, to help Mrs. Art Berthold to celebrate her birthday. Gifts were presented to the guest of honor, and all enjoyed a most delightful evening.

George Olive is spending this week at home. He came to take part in the wedding of his cousin, John Wolph, of Nehawka, when he will be an usher. George is located at Gothenberg, this summer.

The Ed Lorensens had the pleasure of meeting the Ed Bobbitt family, at Cassanova, N. Y., while on their eastern trip, and at the Railroad Fair, in Chicago, they met Mr. and Mrs. Ray Norris and Mrs. William Coppel and her son Lee Coppel, who were spending a week in Chicago.

At a meeting held last week, Robert Renner was chosen as Cub Scout Master, and Sigvel Jensen as the assistant Cub Scout Master. Mr. Chris Rasmussen was ordered by his doctor, to remain in bed to rest for a month, and his son, Howard Rasmussen has taken over his work of selling hybrid seed corn, until he is able to resume the work.

Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Maxfield, of Lincoln, were Sunday guests at the home of Mrs. Maxfield's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Chris Rasmussen.

One hundred fifty guests are seated in the dining hall at the United Missionary Camp meeting, at each meal, this week, and most of these are from out of town. The dormitories and the cabins are all filled, and the people of the community will be asked to open their homes and give rooms to about fifty guests over the week end. Plans are being made for an additional one hundred, who probably will return home at night. Meals are being planned for between three hundred fifty and four hundred fifty, for Sunday dinner. Mrs. Sam Rector of Weeping Water is the head cook, and she is ably assisted by Mrs. Lola Hood, of Maryville, Missouri.

Interest is growing each day, and the pastor, Rev. Burgess, and his song evangelists and children's workers, Rev. and Mrs. Gordon Beck, are holding the interest of all who attend. Friday will be their Missionary Day and Saturday will be their big Youth Rally, beginning at 10 a.m. and a Recreation Hour, from 1 to 2 p.m., and another service for the young people at 2:30 p.m., with Rev. M. E. Engbrecht, of Dolton, South Dakota, in charge. Many more visitors will arrive for the week end and for the ministerial conference, which opens Monday, the twenty third, and will last for three days. The Camp meeting will close Sunday, August the 22.

Weeping Water people are delighted over the fact that the City Park has again been put in order, and made ready for picnic parties. Stationary tables and seats have been added, and there is city water in the park, as well as a stove for cooking purposes. Many people have been enjoying the park this summer, and many more probably will make use of its advantages for picnic dinners during the county fair.

The unfortunate accident, at the Sunday evening soft ball game, which sent Carroll Walters to the hospital, has proven to be less serious than was first anticipated. At first it was feared that his neck was broken but the verdict now is that it is spasms of the muscles of the neck, and that he will be allowed to return home, this week, but that he must wear a brace on his neck.

The L.C.P. Woman's club met at the Pleasant View school house Thursday afternoon, with Mrs. John Rieke and Mrs. Vern Gish as hostesses. There were twelve members and eight visitors present. OUT OUR WAY

By A. R. Williams

Will Search For Prehistoric Nebraskans

CAMBRIDGE, Neb. (U.P.)—A Smithsonian Institution archeologist is trying to solve a threefold mystery concerning the prehistoric people who once inhabited tiny villages along Medicine Creek in south Nebraska.

The archeologist, Marvin Kivett, is investigating remains of villages on the site where Medicine Creek dam now is being built.

He is trying to determine where the aborigines came from at what period they lived, and what happened to them. "It is interesting to note," Kivett said, "that remains of a similar culture have been found in the Texas Panhandle. The only difference was that the Texas villages had stone huts, while the Medicine Creek people used logs for their homes."

Carving Is Puzzle
Kivett also reported that a piece of shale, in which was carved a picture of a human face, was found recently.

"This type of carving," he said, "usually is associated with the pre-historic inhabitants of the southeast."

Now working on the remains of a third village in the dam site area, Kivett believes that each was occupied at a different period. All were before the coming of the white man, he said.

There is no evidence of horses, metal or glass, which were brought by the whites. Kivett would like to ascertain as definitely as possible the times of the settlements, but hasn't found too much in the way of clues.

As to what happened to the people, the researchers still are baffled. Kivett said he has found no evidence of warfare, or any sign that such peaceful farming folk were wiped out by invading tribes.

Skeletons Missing
In fact, Kivett admitted that so far he has found only one burial place, and that contained only one skeleton—that of a man, with one arm missing. The archeologist still has many people to account for. Kivett had expected to find that the people buried many bodies in each burial place.

This one burial place, he said, was on a high hill, was dug only about 17 inches deep, and contained a few pieces of pottery, arrowheads and some beads made from gulf coast shells.

Kivett conjectured that the shell beads must have been traded from one tribe to another, to reach Nebraska.

These people kept two kinds of dogs, Kivett said. They raised corn, beans and domesticated sunflowers. They kept bees and caught fish, mussels, crayfish and turtles in the creek.

Kivett said Medicine Creek valley is receiving possibly more archeological attention this year than any other site in the United States, with three agencies participating: University of Nebraska, Nebraska Historical Society and Smithsonian Institution.

Columbus Man Escapes Custody Of Iron Curtain

COLUMBUS, Neb. (U.P.)—Seventy-year-old Ludwig Huettner and his Austrian born wife are happy that he never forfeited his American citizenship in 37 years in Europe.

The couple arrived in the United States from Czechoslovakia recently. They fled from Europe after conditions became intolerable for them.

After the Communists came in to control, their 80-acre farm was "nationalized." They could continue to live on it, temporarily at least, and could work it. But they were no longer working for themselves. They were working for the government. They decided to return to Huettner's native America if they could.

U. S. Gives Aid
Mr. and Mrs. Huettner applied to the United States consulate at Prague. They were told they could come to the United States under provisions made for admission of "displaced persons."

Their travel expenses were paid by the U. S. government. They were given $115 to tide them over.

That, briefly, is the story of how Ludwig Huettner returned to the land of his birth.

He and his wife traveled halfway across the country to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Hittner of Humphrey, Neb. Shortly afterward they found employment at St. Mary's Hospital in Columbus.

Huettner told friends that conditions began to get bad during the war when the Russian army came to their home community. Conditions reached a climax when the Russian-instigated Communist regime seized power.

Too Much to Stand
Worst of all the nationalizing of their homestead, Huettner said. There were many other things that a man American-born could not stand. You had to get a permit to go from one village to another. You were required to sign your name to a ballot in the election.

It was compulsory to vote and the Communist candidates were the only names on the ballot. Huettner reported that if Red Cross aid seeped through to the villages he didn't see any of it.

Huettner was born in Platte County, Neb., near where he now is employed, in 1878. In 1911 he went to Europe with his foster parents, Mr. and Mrs. Anton Huettner. There they settled on a farm in Austria. The farm later became part of Czechoslovakia when that country was formed after the first World War.

"Kid" Graves Will Serve As Barber

The barber, for King Korn Karnival, will be Kid Graves, former welter champion boxer. Chairman Harry Donat made it official last Saturday and Graves immediately started looking for tools.

Most important of the tools, a dull saw, for shaving, he has himself and the other tools will be furnished by his fellow employees at the BRES shops. A man from the tin shop will furnish his own tin snips and will trim beards, when called upon for that operation.

Some fellows are squawking about the "Whisker Rule" and are determined to fight it called upon for barbering but if they'll just stop and think, of the matter, as part of the "fun of the day," perhaps they'll reconsider and take it as part of the fun and join in with the rest of Plattsmouth citizens and help with more fun.
