

Flood Control Move Off to a Successful Start

(Continued from Page One) inches in the drainage area, there was eighty per cent carried off in the flood waters, that later caused damage and danger to Plattsmouth property. One of the ways to check this in a natural manner was that of expanding the contour terracing of the farms, to hold much of the water for use on the farms, planting of more trees and shrubbery that would tend to hold back the rapid movement of water. These methods would, in the opinion of Mr. Reed handle the surplus water of a three inch rainfall without any other methods.

The matter of retard dams was also discussed by members of the visiting party, dams that would impound the waters from heavy rains until they could be released. If sites were available in the surrounding territory these dams would serve a good purpose in holding back surplus waters and supplement the conservation work on the soil.

S. S. Davis pointed out the value of terracing on the farms, this tending to save the valuable top soil and take care of the surface water in an orderly manner.

The meeting heard a short discussion of the conditions at McGregor, Ia., located on the Mississippi river, where the general set up is similar to that in Plattsmouth as far as flood water is concerned.

During the meeting Dr. Condra pointed out that a sewer to handle the surplus water, if it was not checked at the source, would be very high cost to the community, this same result could be reached by careful and understanding handling of the soil conservation program.

John Bauer, Sr., and Charles Grosshans, local men who live and have interest in the flood areas, told of their experiences and approved the plan for a program that would save the soil and hold off the surface water.

With the strong sentiment of the meeting evidenced for some steps to start on the conservation program, Dr. Condra stated a committee would be appointed to serve in the capacity of advisors, on work in this locality, if possible he would like a local member on the committee. This will give the flood control plan a great start and with the advice and council of the trained technicians of the state and federal government in preparing their plan for action.

There were present the members of the local soil conservation committee, Herman Schwepp, Ezra Nebel of Murdock, Richard Spangler of this city, Mr. Schwepp promised full co-operation in the plans for the flood control. Tom Stacey of Weeping Water, former head of the soil conservation work in Cass county, was here as was C. E. Nutter, the present head of the work in this locality.

Preceding the meeting at the court house, the visitors and a number of the local people were entertained at dinner at the Rainey Coffee Shop.

Friends From Czechoslovakia Write Letter

(continued from page 1) Our harvest is over and we are kept busy all the time, but what is it all worth when we have to give so much away and constantly, the Cecks are terrified. Here we can not get any textiles regardless we can not obtain any cloth. You know we have 12 Stryclue of land and there are eight members in our family. We have three head of cattle, two cows and one heifer and each day we must give away two litry (one gal.) of milk. We have two hogs and must buy two more. Fortunately we will have plenty of potatoes and we won't dare give them away because we have the potato beetle. We keep busy and soon we will pick the potatoes. Soon we will have winter weather and I am worried about the children.

In the winter my husband is employed as a woods worker so that leaves me here alone so I have the work here to do and the weather is bad. Don I am begging you if you have there any cast off clothes of your own no matter what or how bad, I will mend them. Please send them for the children, please send it to me and do not be mad at me that I write you this. Any cast off coat would be appreciated.

Please write soon. There is a young lady here who reads English. She will translate it. We will be waiting.
