Mollie Gobelman Entertains Groups

Two of the very attractive parties of the pre-Easter season were the bridge parties given at the home of Mollie Gobelman the past week where several of the friends had been invited to participate in the entertainment.

The home of Mrs. Gobelman is most attractive with the large array of antiques and the wonderful collection of china and glass that always is most alluring to her guests.

The first of the parties was on Tuesday, February 22, the home being arranged in the decorations of the Washington birthday theme, with red as the dominating color. Favors were the Martha Washington aprons and the theme of the event was carried out in the refreshments with George Washington hatchet cookies being a note of the plan. In the bridge games Mrs. Robert M. Walling was the winner of high score, Mrs. James F. Begley second and Mrs. Iola Ole.

The second of the parties was held on Tuesday of this week when another of the group of friends were entertained. The St. Patrick's day theme was used in the decorative features of the home where the ladies enjoyed four tables of bridge. The winners of the evening were Mrs. Louis Hansen, first; Mrs. Henry Starkjohn, second and Mrs. Harold Lebens, third. The favors of the evening were small vases of sweet peas. The St. Patrick's idea was carried out in the shamrock cookies that formed a part of the delicious luncheon. Assisting at both of the parties were Mrs. Jean Lockin and Miss Catherine Conis.

The Guild had four guests present, Mrs. Joe Case of Omaha, Mrs. John Condon, Rose Mary Frockenberg and Mrs. Pauline Drovinsky.

Sense of Proportion ELECTRA, Tex. (UP)—A boy, 15, who confessed to four burglaries here in less than three weeks, denied overlooking $200 in a filling station. He took only $14. He saw the larger amount, but was afraid to steal so much money, he told police.

Projects of the World Day of Prayer

In Monday's Journal we read how the World Day of Prayer began and the organizations in various localities were drawn together in one common universal observance on the first Friday in Lent.

At this writing it is Ash Wednesday—the beginning of Lent—and last year there were 15,000 meetings held in our United States with a million and a half copies of the Call to Prayer and its program sent from the National Office.

Plans for a day of prayer and an offering to spread the work of love throughout the world and answer the urgent need for Christian compassion, sprang almost simultaneously as the travelers noted the total lack of suitable Christian reading matter in the Orient for those who had learned to read. Last year's offering amounted to over $195,000—yet a meager amount compared to what we spend alone on luxuries. So now a Christian literature committee has books and magazines printed for women and children in all fields of missions, such as the Braille system for the 14 million blind, especially children so afflicted from neglect from birth. They are being saved from lives of idleness, beggary and prostitution.

At the top of the educational field was the need for Christian colleges for young women, and now eight Union Christian colleges (3 in China; 4 in India; 1 in Japan) are interdenominational and are bringing forth many leaders to help their own. Inside America there are interdenominational services of traveling schools, recreation centers and Christian teaching for migrants and share-croppers, who are a vital part of our food industries. Also religious work directors for Indian youth in Indian schools, are redeeming partly the personal neglect and property exploitation which was suffered by the inhabitants of America before the Anglo Saxon arrived.

In the face of so great a task all previous monetary offerings seem very small, but smaller still may be the comparison and concern of individuals of any race or nationality for fellow-men in unfortunate circumstances. May many observe this "World Day of Prayer" as a time of meditation on God's plan for them as His followers and a rededication of themselves to put Him first in all their interests and activities.

Remember the theme and places of the several services and enter into one of them with sincere consecration. A nursery where mothers may leave small children in care of competent helpers will be provided for the afternoon service at the Methodist church. There is a nursery room equipped by the Union Adult Fellowship class of the church school.

The marriage service was celebrated by the Rt. Rev. Monsignor George Agius the pastor of the church.

The marriage was witnessed by Miss Doris Oliver and John Baburek, brother of the groom of this city.

Attending were the parents of the young people and other relatives.

Miss Wood wore as her wedding costume a dress of light tan with top coat of blue, with shoes to match and accessories of light blue.

Following the wedding the bride and groom and attendants motored to Omaha for a wedding breakfast. Mr. and Mrs. Baburek will make their home in this city where the groom is a member of the Baburek Brothers machine shop firm.

The bride has grown to womanhood in this city and is a graduate of the Plattsmouth high school.
