Sow Large Flower Seeds Where Plant is to Stand

Sow Several Seeds to Insure a Sturdy Plant. If Excess Plants Develop, They Can Be Moved.

When flower seeds large enough to handle are sown direct in the garden, place them exactly where you want the plants to stand, so the sturdiest seedlings may mature without experiencing the shock of transplanting.

Sow three to five seeds to produce each plant desired. This will insure against failure of some seedlings from the disease and accidents which beset young plants. If several survive to the stage of vigorous youth, the excess plants may be considered as a bonus, and be removed to other locations.

The method to be followed in this kind of sowing should be the same that is used for sowing vegetables in hills. Scoop out a shallow depression, and mix with the soil at its bottom a teaspoonful of balanced plant food; covering this with fresh soil so that the hole is nearly filled. Then sow the flower seeds, and cover lightly with porous top soil, or specially prepared covering soil. Mark the spot with a stake, so you will not disturb it with cultivating tools before the seeds sprout.

With flower seeds, even more than with vegetables, the depth to which they are covered, and the light, porous character of the soil that covers them, are of vital importance.

The rule as to depth is that seeds be covered four times their diameter. This is obviously too precise for practical use, since some seeds are so tiny it would take a micrometer to determine the sowing depth.

There is no need for such precision, but the practical way to proceed is merely to press the tiniest seeds into fine soil and sprinkle just enough earth over them to cover; while larger seeds are placed deeper, in the proportion indicated by the rule. This covering soil is more important than the soil below the seeds. If your garden has much clay, and you have a limited amount of humus, the best place for it is over the seeds. The main point is to prevent a crust from forming, and it will pay in many cases to prepare a special soil for covering. Mix a third of your best top soil, passed through a sieve, with a third coarse sand, and as much peat moss, or humus from the compost pile.

The Nehawka chapter of the F. H. A. sponsored an Easter novelty sale Friday and Saturday before Easter. The profit from this sale is to go for a slip cover for the cot which the chapter recently purchased for the school.

meeting was held. One of the guest speakers was the state president of FFA. He spoke of some things of FFA which tie in with FHA.

Lela Edmonds of Nehawka helped in counting the votes. Two of the girls tied but after a discussion it was settled fairly.

After the business meeting the girls went to the Student Union for dinner. One of the objectives of any convention is to meet people and the girls found the Student Union just the place for that.

At dinner the girls compared notes of their own chapter with those across the table who came from other towns. Although they came from larger towns and attended a larger school we were proud that the Nehawka chapter was much more active.

Many guests were introduced at the luncheon but the most interesting was a Home Economics teacher from Germany. She taught in the section of Germany where the local chapter sent packages of clothing. In broken English she told of the conditions under which Home Ec. girls must work in Germany. Her classes were held in an old building and lighting and heat were very bad. The girls of Germany learned to sew on very old materials. She was fascinated with the bright new materials that our girls use in their sewing.

The theme of the banquet was International Good Will. It was carried out very well. Among guests were two ladies from the Philippines and one from Greece. "The Home of Tomorrow" was sung at the banquet by the Fairbury chapter. This song was formerly sung to the tune of "The Bells of Saint Mary's" but the music professor of the University of Nebraska wrote a new melody for it and it was adopted as the state song.

After luncheon, installation of officers was held in Love Library auditorium in an impressive ceremony. Lily Hamada was installed as State F. H. A. president. She is a Japanese-American girl which shows that F. H. A. does not have race prejudice.

After the afternoon session, Valerie Mayfield and Betty Simonds delivered clothes to the White Hall orphanage. These clothes were collected and cleaned by the F. H. A. girls.
