They made the trip west on the Portland Rose of the Union Pacific and had a delightful time on the train as it sped westward, two days and two nights being required to reach Portland. They had the opportunity of taking pictures from the train. They came near missing the train at Cheyenne, Wyoming, during a ten minute stop as they were busy taking pictures.

Hood, one of the wonder spots of the coast that can be seen from the streets of Portland. There was a lot of snow on the mountain and the party had their picture taken in a snow bank. They visited Timber Line lodge whose fittings are all hand carved and very lovely. From Mt. Hood they could see miles away and mountains over in Washington. They also had the pleasure of dining at a Chinese restaurant.

While in Portland they enjoyed the Festival of Roses parade, a very beautiful sight, as every float was made of roses and secured many pictures of this feature.
