I Am the Flag

(Reprinted by Request)

YES, I AM THE FLAG—but I am not just a square of silk, tinted in red white and blue; I am not just one state, I am all 48 states.

You think of me as a symbol of the battles of the country's ages, as being there in the front lines at Bunker Hill and Saratoga, the Hindenburg Line and Bataan and Saipan, the Bulge and Tokyo; you think of me on the top of a hill on Sarabachi, dipped over the grave of the Unknown Soldier, saluted by every school-child at morning assemblies, rippling at the staff as the band opens your favorite ball game with the National Anthem, tucked in a coat lapel on Flag Day.

But I am more than that. I am everything that is star-spangled American. I am popcorn and hot dogs and ice cream sodas; I am streamlined trains and cars and planes, tying the ends of the country together, clasping hands across the miles.

I am the Mason Dixon Line, the Great Divide, the Grand Canyon; I am a boy cutting down a cherry tree and not telling a lie; I am lilacs in the dooryard and petunias in window boxes; I am hope and the realization of a hope.

I am singing-commercials and "whodunits" and quiz shows giving away refrigerators and airplanes and trips around the world; I am cowboy songs and boogie beats and bobby soxers; I am the New Look, the Easter Bunny, Santa Claus and Mickey Mouse.

I am parades and drum majorettes and big brass bands; I am television bringing you news the very minute it happens; I am education and good food and doctors and justice and Social Security; I am laughter unrestrained and the freedom to say what I want to say when and where I want to say it; I am a

I am your belief in yourself, your dream of what People may become; I am your churches with their courageous cross-tipped spires reaching for the sun; I am the glorious Four Freedoms; I am children looking up, unafraid.

I am the champion of the world's peoples; I am the force which will try to prevent war coming again, but if it shall and must come, I will lead you in the same triumphant way again and blend my colors with all those countries which are striving for the right to live as we live here in America. PLANS FOR POWER

BUILDING AND PLANNING FOR NEBRASKA'S ELECTRICAL FUTURE

Electric facilities throughout Consumers Public Power District are rapidly being improved and expanded to keep pace with increased electrical use and provide for Nebraska's electrical future.

Construction of facilities totaling $7,500,000 approved for 1949 is well under way in an extended program of expansion and improvement started following the close of the war.

Even while men and machines are busy building, new plans for even greater expansion are in the making.

Consumers Public Power District, in cooperation with other power agencies operating in the state, is developing plans for new expansion to assure greater electrical advantages for all Nebraska users, farm and city alike—whereby greatest economy and efficiency will be achieved for all.

Truly, Nebraska is building electrically and with this valuable expansion, comes new progress for Nebraskans who are constantly making greater and greater use of low cost electricity.
