Japan Reaches Out for Tourist Trade in East

By PETER KALISCHER
United Press Staff Correspondent
TOKYO (U.P.)—Japan, with energetic prodding by the occupation, is going after the tourist trade to build up its dollar income.

Twelve different kinds of tours have been authorized by Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters to entice travelers to tarry in picturesque Nippon and spend some of the foreign exchange Japan needs to pay for imported food and raw materials.

The tours range from a two-day stop-over from ships docking at Kobe and Yokohama to a 31-day de luxe itinerary of scenic high spots. There is also an economy six-day tour costing $55 plus railroad fare, throughout which tourists must stay at Japanese hotels and inns and eschew the plushier hotels boasting air conditioning and American comforts.

M. H. Hall, executive officer of Gen. MacArthur's economic and scientific section, predicted that between $2- and $3,000,000 will be spent by travelers in Japan in the next four years.

Accommodations Lacking
Right now, however, Japan has barely enough accommodations to meet the needs of the 5,000 tourists who are expected to visit the country during 1949. Last year 4,367 tourists spent $28,590 in Japan on extremely limited tours. During the first five months of 1949, half that number already have spent close to $60,000 here, for food and lodging and not including what they spent for souvenirs.

The main trouble with the Japanese tourist hotels, asserts Hall, is that they are deficient in sanitary facilities.

"Foreign travelers do not object to Japanese style inns," Hall said. "In fact, many prefer them. But they do insist on adequate sanitary facilities and in this respect Japanese inns are woefully lacking."

As a result allied headquarters is needing Japanese hotel keepers to modernize already existing better class hotels and inns.

Plenty of Scenery
Hall, who takes the business man's view, points out that the nice thing about Japanese scenery is that it never wears out.

"A hundred thousand people can look at Mt. Fuji," he said, "without depreciating it in value in any way. Scenery is the one natural Japanese resource that is practically inexhaustible."

Controls are being relaxed all along the line to permit visitors to come to what is still an occupied country. Friends and relatives of permanent residents in Japan are now permitted to come for a visit. Seven hundred so far have availed themselves of the opportunity.

But the main attractions in Japan, which the Japan Travel Bureau insists is a year round resort, are the hot springs, the winter skiing, the summer cor-morant fishing in Fifu, the cherry blossoms in April and the geisha parties which go on all the time.

DRIVER HOPES TO RECOVER WRECK OF THE HESPERUS
READING, Mass.—A deep-sea diver, Art Mercer, is planning an ocean floor treasure hunt to recover the remains of the wrecked Hesperus, the ship which the poet Henry Wadsworth Longfellow made famous.

"Longfellow made the Hesperus so famous that any scrap I salvage will be a sure sale," he said, "and I think I'll salvage enough to make the expedition profitable, if I can find it."

He said contrary to the details in Longfellow's poem, the Hesperus is in Boston Harbor and not in outer Gloucester Harbor.

"Don't smoke in bed, that last cigarette may be your last cigarette," is a printed slogan found in many hotel rooms today.

MOTOR BOAT IN FLIGHT WHEN STORM STRIKES
SPOKANE, Wash. (U.P.)—While sitting in his cabin at Loon Lake near here, C. E. Stephenson remarked to his wife that the air seemed unusually still.

"As I headed for the door, a sort of freak tornado struck," Stephenson said. "My 450-pound motor boat suddenly was lifted from the beach as though by invisible hands."

Witnesses said the boat turned end over end, soaring higher and higher to more than 100 feet. Then the boat crashed into the water, a total wreck.

Worse Than Chaw Beef
ARKANSAS CITY, Kan. (U.P.)—Things aren't the same at the old swimmin' hole. A thief has spoiled the spot along the Arkansas River. Jess Crawford decided to dunk himself kid style to beat the heat. When he finished his swim, he found someone had removed $27 from his trousers.

Fire Put Out in Style
GILROY, Cal. (U.P.)—Firemen put out a blaze here in style. They were all dressed in tuxedos for their annual ball when the alarm came in.

Dear Old Golden Rule Days
NATICK, Mass. (U.P.)—Sentimental citizens paid $1 each for 200 desks in the old Lincoln School, which was built in 1862 and will be razed soon. The buyers searched through the 340 desks up for sale until they found one on which they had carved their initials as school children.

Desert Dogs Get Break
PALM SPRINGS, Cal. (U.P.)—A home for stray dogs where they can be cared for and fed until claimed or adopted is planned for this desert area. Mr. and Mrs. Walter Glatters said the shelter would be a memorial for their prize-winning Boston terrier, Duke, who died recently.

Headquarters Robbed
CHICAGO (U.P.)—Forty policemen were on duty at police headquarters but they didn't seem to bother a casual visitor to the squad room. He broke into a locker, took a gun and holster and walked out after threatening an elevator operator.

The spotted skunk is often known as the hydrophobia skunk but it has been proved that it is no more susceptible to hydrophobia than the common skunk or most other mammals.
